INTRODUCTION

The Abbe genealogy, as here published, is the consummation of Professor Cleveland Abbe's life-long interest in the history of his family. Before reaching his twentieth year he began to collect items of interest about his ancestors and the collateral lines, and in spite of more or less interruption he has continued to do so all through his busy career. During the early sixties, Mr. William Weaver, who was then editor of the Willimantic Journal, began the publication of what he planned to be an exhaustive work on the old families of Windham. After publication in the Journal he corrected and republished the sketches in pamphlet form. Mr. Weaver died before his hopes were realized and we have only a small portion of the work, covering the families alphabetically from "A" to "Bill." His fragmentary notes on other families have been preserved in the library of the Connecticut Historical Society where they were deposited as a gift from his son.

From time to time other members of the family added to the items collected by or worked up at the suggestion of Professor Abbe. A few years ago, finally realizing that other matters demanded too much time and that he could not arrange this material in final form, he turned over all his material to Josephine Genung Nichols (Mrs. L. Nelson Nichols). She has arranged the data in its present form, and added to it, as far as practicable, by extensive correspondence, library research and examinations of the public records at some of the former homes of the family.

Collaborators.—Most helpful contributions to this work have been made by: Mr. Charles E. Abbe of Sara Sota, Fla., who left an invaluable collection of records about the line of Obadiah Abbe, the basis of our history of that branch; Miss Norah D. Abbe of Elyria, Ohio, and Mrs. John Emerson, on Eleazer and the Abbe families of Elyria; Miss Julia Maynard on the Vermont Abbeys and other New England lines; Mrs. Bronson Post Reynolds, about the Jonathan Abbey line; Mr. Richard N. Abbey on the southern lines; Mrs. D. Stearns Jamison on the Harris Abbey record and portraits; Mr. Charles T. Hendrick, whose unflagging interest and remarkable ability has secured materials hitherto unavailable; Mr. Alden Freeman, whose love for the family is expressed in the beautiful Thomas Abbey monument just erected on Enfield Green; Mrs. Martha B. Hanna on the Pease family descended from Mary Abbey; Mrs. Ashbel Welch, on the Welch family. Lack of space prevents mention of many others who have also contributed to the work and have cheered the compiler by their kind replies. We thank you all once more.

A family history is never really complete or entirely satisfactory; but we feel that we have gone to as much expense as was justified. We have made this beginning; may others continue the work.

Professor Abbe had hoped to make this genealogy no mere list of the members of the family. He would have it a contribution to the study of heredity, so has added as much as practicable on the personal characteristics of its members and has included many available photographs. He believes that the study of any good clean family will bring out facts just as well worth following up for the development of the personality of the nation, as are the facts brought out by the work of criminologists and social workers in the field of the mentally deficient, etc., which show the immense value to a country, of the study of inheritance of traits that increase state expenses for caring for such defectives.

Arrangement.—The general arrangement of the matter is the same as is commonly used in similar works on genealogy. We have tried to avoid unnecessary numbers and to simplify the work as much as possible in order to make it useful to every one. Few abbreviations are used in addition to b., m., and d., for born, married, and died, respectively.

Dates.—Among the earlier records will be noted some double dating. According to the old calendar used in England and her colonies up to 1751, the year began on March 26. In that year England followed the lead set by most European countries and decreed that after the last day of December, 1751, the 25th day of March should no longer be reckoned the last day of the year and that the year 1752 should begin on January 1. Accordingly in most dates prior to 1752, we find the old year continued to March 25 with the new year annexed to it from the first of January. This was not a uniform practice, however.

Spelling.—The spelling of the name has been a source of perplexity from the earliest days to the present. Abbe or Abbey have been the favorite forms, followed by Abby, Abbee, Abbé and other variations usually not authorized by the bearer of the name. In arranging the data for publication we have made every effort to follow the usage of each particular family in this matter; there are many errors no doubt in records sent by someone not wholly familiar with the usage of the family concerned. In some cases close relatives have used different spellings, thereby adding to the chance of errors. The records of the Abbay, Aby, and of a few other families have been added, although we do not know that they are connected with the family of John Abbe. The name is not a common one in England or elsewhere. It was probably a name of local derivation, denoting one who lived at or near an abbey.

The late Dr. Edward Payson Abbe of New Bedford, Mass., believed in his French origin. He had a coat of arms that belonged to and was used by a French family in Normandy. This coat of arms is described as: a red eagle with beak and legs of gold on a shield of silver. In British heraldic works the coat of arms is given as: gules, five fusils in fesse between three escallops argent. There are several crests, viz., a cross crosslet azure; an eagle displayed argent between two cross crosslets or, each wing charged with a cross crosslet gules; an eagle's head erased proper; a leopard rampant proper. The motto also varies: "Spei mea coelo," or "Confido conqueseo."

It is possible that some of the Abbés came over from France to England at an early date; but we have absolutely no evidence that John Abbey was entitled to use these arms, or that he ever did so.

Migrations.—It is a source of regret that so little is known of the history of John Abbey before he emigrated to America. The Heralds' College, London, began a search for such information some time ago, but thus far no results have been reported. To us it seems likely that he was of or connected with the Abbey family of Staverton (see page 433).

John Abbe, or Abbey, migrated to America at a time when many of England's young men were coming to the new colonies either for freedom from religious persecution, from a love of adventure, or simply from a desire to better their condition. The brief glimpses into his life and character afforded by colonial records, suggest that John Abbey was of the first-mentioned class. He was early a church member and land owner in the New World and his descendants were active for good in their communities. From the first homes in Salem and Wenhams, the three brothers of the second generation went out to new homes in different sections of Connecticut, Windham, and Enfield, where each family became prominently identified with the life of their town. As settlements were extended into the interior, we find the Abbés going on up the Connecticut valley, then turning westward with the tide of settlers through central New York, then on to Ohio, as that country was opened up, and still later on to Michigan and eventually across the continent.

Appendix.—Some items of historical interest which it was not desirable to include in the body of the record but which we are happy to be able to contribute to the family history, have been placed in the Appendix. On pages 406 to 434 we have concisely arranged practically all collected items that might be of use to a future historian. Any information serving to complete these items will be welcome.

IN MEMORY OF

JOHN ABBE AND HIS DESCENDANTS

FIRST GENERATION

1. JOHN¹ ABBE, born in England about 1613; died in Salem, Mass., about 1689-90. The place of birth of John Abbe, the founder of the American Abbe and Abbey families, is unknown, but every indication points to one of the interior and central counties of England as the home of the ancestors of the emigrant. It is not improbable that he was connected with the Abbye family of Staverton, Northampton. The parish registers of Stoke Bruerne, Northampton, show that there were many marriages of Abbyes recorded there during the 16th and 17th centuries.

John Abbe, from the age as given approximately at his death, was born about 1613. The first mention which seems to be of this John Abbe is on a register of the names "of all y^e passengers w^{ch} passed from y^e Porte of London for a whole yeare endinge at X^{mas} 1635 — Those underwritten are to be transported to Virginia imbarqued in y^e Mereh^t bonaventure James Rierofte M^r bound thither have taken y^e oath of allegiance— Jo: Abby^{yeares 22} —" Although this statement says bound for Virginia, it is a well-known fact that many of the early ships destined for Virginia landed many or all of their passengers at other ports, even in New England, and records of the name of John Abbe begin in New England about that time. The above Jo: Abby does not appear in the records of Virginia, nor in the Head Rights for lower Norfolk from 1637 to 1666. The abbreviation Jo: sometimes stood for Joseph, but there are proven instances where it was used for John.

The first reference to the name in the Salem records is on page 11, volume 1, in 1637, or, according to the old method of marking time, 2d of the 11th month, 1636.

"John Abbie is Reed. ffer Inhabitant & is to haue one aere lott for a house next beyond the Gunsmiths, and 3 aeres of planting ground where the Towne hath appointed beyond Castle hill."

There has existed some confusion regarding the various freemen of the name Abbey and Alby. Benjamin Albye was admitted freeman, May 18, 1642, and John Albye in Salem, May 10, 1643. These were, without doubt, the two Abbys, John and Benjamin, mentioned in the early records of Braintree about this time. Benjamin Alby removed to Mendon and had numerous descendants, whose names occasionally appear in printed records as Abbey. John Abbey, sen., of Redding, freeman in 1634, may have been an Alby.

On the 21st, 11th month, 1638, John Abby had a further grant of five acres, location not specified, but, as on the 15th, 2d month, 1639, this record occurs, "Granted unto John Abby 5 aeres neere to Mr Throgmortons hoggehouse," it may be that the first was the grant and the second the location. Under date of the 25th, 10th month, 1637, it was agreed "the marsh and meadow lands that have formerly been laid in common to this town shall now be appropriated to the inhabitants of Salem, proportioned out to them according to the heads of families. To these that have the greatest number an acre thereof, and to these that have least not above half an acre, and to these that are between both three quarters of an acre, always provided and it is so agreed, that none shall sell away their proportions of meadow, more or less, nor lease them out to any above three years, unless they sell or lease out their houses with their meadow."

Under the above division a list of the inhabitants was taken, and the land divided. Jo. Abby is named in 1638 as having three in his family, and receives half an acre.

On the 23d, 11th, 1642, ten acres are granted to John Abby together with several other ten-acre grants, all to be laid out near to Kings lot. This was on the Beverly side near Bass River, and on the 15th of the 12th month, 1642, it is voted "ordered that John Abby shall have 10 acres of land at Enon in exchange of 10 acres of land bounded out nere Basse River."

The lot near Bass River was afterward granted to Michael Sallows. The record of the grants to Abbey show that he was of the same standing in the community as the great majority of the early inhabitants. The grants were in a great measure made with an eye as to the ability of the grantee to develop the land so granted, small grants to the poorer and larger grants to the richer sort.

In 1642, Mr. Fiske organized a church at Enon and the following year the name Enon was changed to Wenham, while a permanent church organization was effected in 1644.

In 1644, under date of the 13th, 6th month, it was agreed that John Abby "shall have all that wastground which lyeth between ye end of ye lott which he lives upon and ye meadow which belongs to ye town, leaving a poles bredth most convenient for a way." (Wenham town records, Worcester.)

Under date of 1653 is a list of engagements with Goodman Haws about the mill, and "John Aby gives a day and a half of his labor toward its erection," and others contributed in like manner, some also giving the use of oxen.

Mr. Fiske left the town in 1655 followed by a number of the church, and in 1657 Mr. Newman was procured as pastor. Under date of November, 1657, in a total rate of £42, 19, divided among twenty-four persons, of whom five paid a total of £14, John Abey is assessed £1, 5, which was about the sum paid by eleven others, but two being less.

In 1659, twenty-seven pay a rate of £46, 2, of whom sixteen pay £1 or a trifle over. Of these John Abey pays £1, 5, as before, "in corne or cattle."

In 1660 he was assessed as Goodman Abey at eight shillings toward a new meeting house or repairing the old one. The new house was built in 1663.

Under date of 6th, 11th month, 1661, John Abbey, Sr., and Edward Waldron had a town grant of land to be equally divided between them. The use of the title Senior at this time helps to place the birth of the son John.

In 1663 Goodman Abey, Sr., and John Clarke are chosen to join with the selectmen to make the minister's rate for the present year.

In 1669 and in 1671 John Abbey appears as constable, an office of great local power and responsibility.

April 3, 1675, John Abbe deeded 10 acres of land to his son Samuel, Thomas, John, and Mary Abbe, being witnesses. John Abbe, sen., was a witness to the will of Edw^d Walden of Salem, 4th month, 1679.

In 1683, John Abbey, who had been supporting his son Thomas, who lived with him and cared for him, dismissed Thomas on account of his bad behavior and called his son John, junior, to take charge of him and his affairs. The son, John, proceeded early to build a new house, as the old one was unfit to live in.

John Abbe married (1) MARY ———. She was born in England about 1615-20, and died in Wenham, Mass., September 6, 1672. "Mary, the wife of John Abbey, senr. dyed the 9 Sept. 1672"; Wenham records. She was doubtless the mother of all of his children. Her name is given as Mary Loring, by Frederick Orr Woodruff, who says that the name was found on Enfield records by one who made researches for him there.

John Abbe married (2) November 25, 1674, MRS. MARY GOLDSMITH, widow of Richard Goldsmith, who was killed by lightning, May 18, 1674. She was living in 1683. "John Abbie and Marah Goldsmith maryed 25 of Novemb, 1674"; Wenham records.

SECOND GENERATION

2. JOHN² ABBE, son of John¹ and Mary () Abbe, born in 1636 or 1637, probably in Salem, Mass., died suddenly, December 11, 1700, in Windham, Conn. As early as 1663, he was one of three to oversee the Town's Common and to resist encroachments on the timber. He may be the John Abbe who was constable in 1669. He is first described as a yeoman of Wenham, and was admitted to freedom by the court at Boston, May 11, 1670. In a document of 1683, his father designated him as the heir to his estate in Wenham upon the condition of his caring for his father and mother in their old age. He apparently resided upon this estate until about 1696.

The following items from the inventory of Robert Macklaffin of Wenham, September 19, 1690, doubtless refer to this John Abbe:

To Jno. Abbe for nursing—£1

To Jno. Abbe more for tending the swine for fattening—s16-d3

To John Abbe due for worke to save the corne & thresh the ry & killing the swine & carrying them to Salem & about fencing, £1-s18-d6.

March 9, 1694-5, he sold to Francis Wainwright a house and lands in Wenham, 50 acres in all; and in the following year, February 21, he had a deed of the same property back from Wainwright. In 1696 he disposed of his property in Wenham and purchased of Lieutenant Exereise Conant, July 13, 1696, for £70, silver money, home lot number 7, at Windham Centre, with the 1000-acre right belonging, dwelling house, etc. May 23, 1695, Jo. Abbey was a witness to a deed of Exercise and Sarah Conant of Beverly (Essex Deeds, Volume 2, page 101). He sold his farm in Wenham, 30 acres with buildings, to Nathaniel Wainwright, October 19, 1696, for £130. He probably soon after removed to Windham, Conn., for on December 9, 1696, he was admitted a freeman of that town as John Abbe, Sen^r, of Windham. He and his wife, Hannah, were dismissed from the Wenham Church to that of Windham by a letter of October 28, 1700, and were both original members of the first church in Windham at its organization, December 10, 1700.

Wenham Oct. 29th, 1700.

September 4, 1701.

John² Abbe married (1) ———. Isaac Goodale, who was perhaps the son of Isaac and Patience Goodale, called John Abbe his uncle, so this first wife may have been a Goodale. There were also intermarriages between the Killams and Goodales.

Married (2) HANNAH ———. She was a widow with children at the time of her marriage to John Abbe. She was perhaps Hannah Goldsmith, widow of Richard Goldsmith of Wenham. She married (2) in Windham, November 16, 1703, Jonathan Jennings, sr., of Windham, and died March 8, 1724. On June 16, 1710, Hannah, relict of John Abbe, deceased, divided property to Mary, Abigail, Obadiah, and five children under age. (Windham Deeds, Liber D.) 3. SAMUEL² ABBE, son of John¹ Abbe, born probably at Wenham, Mass., about 1646, or soon after his father's settlement there; died in Windham, Conn., March, 1697-8. His name first appears in the Wenham records at the time of his marriage. "Samuel Abby and Mary Knowlton maryed the 12th October 1672." He received a grant of ten acres of land in Wenham, and land to set his house upon, from his father, John Abbey, and wife, Mary, April 3, 1675, his brethren to have the refusal of the place if he should sell (Essex Deeds, 15:150). Samuel and his wife, Mary, were communicants of the church in Wenham in 1674. He was a land surveyor in 1676 and appears upon the town records as a husbandman, made freeman, October 3, 1680 (Massachusetts Records, 5:540). He was named in his father's will, 1683.

A map of Salem dwellings in 1692, published in Volume I of Upham's Salem Witchcraft, shows the location of Samuel Abbey's house, number 114 on a plot in the south-west part, east of Bald Hill, within the 500 acres laid out to Robert Goodell in 1652 and its subsequent additions.

On November 1, 1682, Samuel Abbey bought of Lott Killam and wife, Hannah, of Salem, he being then of Wenham, 6 acres in Salem on Norrice's Brook (12:112), and also bought of James Stimpson and wife, Priscilla, who had been the widow of Isaac Goodell, at the same place, some land in 1684 (12:113). On April 3, 1697, he and his wife, Mary, sold those lands described as a dwelling house, two orchards, and seventeen acres in Salem, bounding Anthony Needham, John Walcott, Isaac Goodale, Samuel Goodale, Abraham Smith, Abel Gardner, Joseph Flint, and also six acres on Norrice's Brook, and two acres bought of James Stimpson, to Zachariah White of Lynn, all for £130 (12:147). The above James Stimpson was of Reading and had married the widow of the elder Isaac Goodell. At the time of Goodell's death in 1680, the widow was administratrix and Samuel Abbey was one of her sureties. He was then probably of Salem or possibly Topsfield.

He was admitted freeman of Salem Village, March 22, 1689-90. He and his wife were dismissed from the Salem Church September 15, 1689, to unite in forming one at Salem Village; the date of its formation being November 15, 1689. Salem Village is now Danvers. On July 1, 1690, he was taxed at Salem Village, and again, January 18, 1694-5, he and his son were taxed there.

Samuel Abbey of Salem bought of Benjamin Howard of Windham, Conn., for £22. 10s. current money, half an allotment of land (500 acres), being number 2 at the Center, at or near the locality known later as Bricktop. He probably removed to Windham about that time as he was admitted an inhabitant of that town December 21, 1697, and died there March of the following year.

His estate was settled in 1699. The inventory, taken May 9, 1698, gives as legatees, the following: wife, Mary; daughter, Mary, aged 25; son, Samuel, aged 23; son, Thomas, aged 20; Eleazer, aged 18 (the land records prove that this is a mistake for Elizabeth); Ebenezer, aged 16; Merey, aged 14; Sarah, aged 13; Hepsibah, aged 10; Abigail, aged 8; John, aged 7; Benjamin, aged 6; Jonathan, aged 2. One record says he left a son, Eleazer, and a daughter, Abigail, each 8 years old at his death. This is doubtless an attempt to rectify the error noted above.

Samuel Abbe was living in Salem during the days of witchcraft and was one of those opposed to its fanaticisms. One Rebecca Nourse, on trial as a witch, produced a paper signed by several "respectable inhabitants" of Salem, among whom was Samuel Abbe. This document as to her good character caused her to be set at liberty but the sentence was later changed for some reason and she was put to death as a witch. Only a few years ago a monument to her memory was erected by her descendants.

Samuel Abbey testifies as to Mercy Lewis, May 20, 1692, she being at the house of her neighbor, John Putnam, jr., and accused of witchcraft.

Samuel Abbe and his wife, Mary, were witnesses in a witch trial in Salem in 1692 against Sarah Snow, a woman of vicious temper who had lived in their home for a time but was dismissed on account of her disagreeable ways. She vowed vengeance upon them and when several of their cows and hogs were taken sick, the blame was laid to her as a witch.

The following are taken from Records of Salem Witchcraft, copied from the original documents, Volume 1, pages 24 and 25.

Warrant for Sarah Good was given at Salem, February 29, 1691-2, in response to complaints of Sarah Vibber, Abigail Williams, Elizabeth Hubbard, Ann Putnam, and Jno. Vibber. Among the many depositions in witness to her malign practices were those of Samuel Abbey and wife.

Samuel² Abbe married in Wenham, Mass., October 12, 1672, MARY KNOWLTON, born 1653, daughter of William and Elizabeth () Knowlton. She married (2), April 27, 1699, Abraham Mitchell and had by him a son, Daniel, who was born and died December 10, 1700. Mary Mitchell, formerly Mary Abby, was dismissed from the Salem Village Church to Windham, Conn., September 14, 1701.

The following notes are from the "Knowlton Ancestry," compiled by Rev. C. H. W. Stocking of Freehold, N. J., published 1897:

The name Knowlton reaches back traditionally to the time of William the Conqueror, 1066-87. Richard Knowlton was born 1553, probably at Knowlton Manor, which is situated about six miles from the great cathedral at Canterbury, Kent County, England. He married, July 17, 1577, Elizabeth Cantize. The last of their four children was William, commonly called Captain William, born 1584, married Ann Elizabeth Smith. They had six children, two of whom died young. Captain William with his remaining family sailed for America about 1632. He died on the passage and was probably buried at Nova Scotia, as an ancient grave-stone bearing the name of William Knowlton, 1632, was discovered there by a land-surveyor in 1839. The family appear to have moved to Massachusetts the next year, probably to Hingham, later to Ipswich. William, second son of Captain William, born in England, 1615, was a member of the first church in Ipswich and a freeman, 1641-2. He was a brick-layer by trade, married Elizabeth ———, and died 1655. The youngest of their seven children was Mary, born 1649, who married Samuel Abbe.

5. OBADIAH² ABBEY, son of John¹ Abbey, born probably in Wenham, Mass., between 1647 and 1652; died in Enfield, Conn., October 28, 1732. From the inventory of his father's estate we learn that he was apprenticed to Richard Goldsmith to learn his trade of shoemaker, and that he served Goldsmith three years from his eighteenth year. As Goldsmith died in 1673, this places the date of Obadiah's birth approximately. He was an early settler of Enfield on the eighth lot from the south corner, east side, one of the original proprietors in 1682. He seems to have been a prominent and influential man of the community, was constable between 1682 and 1717, surveyor of highways in 1692, assessor in 1702. In 1685 he was engaged in a law suit with Isaac Meacham. At Northampton is the will of Obadiah Abbey, dated September 22, 1732; probated November 14, 1732. He names as legatees his wife, Sarah, to whom is given maintenance, all household goods and moveables; his cousin (nephew) Thomas, son of his brother Thomas, to whom is given his Seantie lot, and to the former Thomas' son, Obadiah, house and land, with reversion to his youngest son, Thomas, if the said Obadiah should die; to the last-named Thomas, he gives farm lands at the Mountains; his wife's daughter, Phebe Heal; his cousin John Abbey's oldest son, John. His cousin, Thomas Abbey, and Elizabeth Warriner are made executors. This Elizabeth Warriner was presumably the step-daughter of his wife, who was born in 1686.

Obadiah Abbe's holdings in Enfield are described in the Enfield records: Home lot of 12 acres; 23 acres in the South Field, eastern division; 7 acres upon Schantuek River, 5 acres of it upland and 2, meadow; 2 acres of meadow upon a small brook easterly from the "grate meadow"; 4 acres of meadow by grant of March 5, 1700; and on November 17, 171[], a farm lying west of "Schantuek grate meadow" consisting of 168 acres, some of the boundaries of which were designated as "wh^t Oak Tree marked with the letters O A" and a "Pine Tree marked with the letters O A."

See also under Thomas² Abbe, references to Obadiah's property.

Obadiah Abbe married in Enfield after 1697, SARAH TIBBALS, born November 29, 1654, daughter of Thomas Tibbals of Milford. Her first husband was Daniel Collins, by whom she had children, and she married second Joseph Warriner of Enfield, who died 1697. Obadiah Abbe had no children, so far as is known.

6. THOMAS² ABBE, son of John¹ and Mary () Abbe, born probably in Wenham, Mass., about 1650 to 1656; died in Enfield, Conn., May 17, 1728. He was a witness to a deed made by his father conveying property to his brother Samuel, March 29, 1675. At first he took care of his parents and lived on the homestead, but about 1683 some complaint was made by his father who then turned him away and had his son John assume the charge of the place for himself and his aged wife. Thomas doubtless went immediately to Enfield, Conn., as he was one of the original proprietors of that town in 1683, with the 11th lot, east side, north of the south corner as his home lot. He at once became one of the prominent men of the settlement and is mentioned frequently on the records of Enfield: selectman in 1686, 1689, 1706, 1707, 1709, 1710; fence-viewer repeatedly; assessor in 1705. He was administrator of his father's estate in 1703, and made his father-in-law, Walter Fairfield of Wenham, his attorney. There are several documents in the files at Essex pertaining to a law suit arising out of this.

The case is that of Thomas Abbey of Enfield vs. Peter Legro of Wenham for trespass and the defendant is allowed to substitute his landlord as the defendant. So the case really is vs. Nathaniel Waldron, who held the lands formerly belonging to John Abbe, senior, and by him given to his son John, who in 1696 sold to Waldron. Some of these papers help prove various relationships and distinctly call Thomas of Enfield the son of the older John of Wenham.

Thomas Abbe was active in the military life of the day. He was a soldier in King Philip's War and was wounded at the Great Swamp Fight. He was sergeant in 1711 and lieutenant of the Enfield Trained Band in 1713. Upon the organization of the army for the expedition against Narragansett Fort, Major Samuel Appleton was appointed to the command of the Massachusetts forces and on a list of the soldiers whom the Court, in May, 1676, voted to repay for losses of those who were "damnified" by the burning of Major Appleton's tent at Narragansett, appears the name of Thomas Abbe, £3, s.16. His name is also on the roll of Major Appleton's Company in the Narragansett Campaign. Thomas Abbe's will, made December 12, 1726, probated August 30, 1728, mentions the following: wife Sarah; son Thomas, executor and to inherit the homestead and 57 acres; son John, to inherit land at Seantie Bridge; daughters Sarah Geer and Tabitha Warner to have the cattle. Witnesses were Obadiah Abbe, John Pease, jr., and Joseph Sexton. He styles himself Thomas, senior, a husbandman.

The following passages are taken from the records of Enfield:

Thomas² Abbe married at Marblehead, Mass., December 16, 1683, SARAH FAIRFIELD, born December 24, 1655, at Reading, Mass; died in Enfield, Conn., November 27, 1742. She was the daughter of Walter and Sarah (Skipper) Fairfield, and had previously been married to ——— Needham. The Wenham records give this record of the marriage, "Thomas Abby and Sarah Fairfield of Wenham were married the 17th day of December, 1683, being lawfully published with the consent of her parents Walter Fairfield, and his witness with Moses Maverick and Elizabeth Fairfield." The marriage is recorded in both Marblehead and Wenham.

Walter Fairfield was son of John and Elizabeth () Fairfield, who came to America in 1638. According to tradition he sprang from the Huguenot Beauchamp family that left France for England shortly before St. Bartholomew's Day.

Her cousin Mary, b. Sept. 16, 1684, daughter of John and Hannah () Abbe, was the one who m. James Pease. The Wenham records read: "Mary, the daughter of Thomas Abbe by Sarah his wife, d. It is the belief of the compiler that the marriage to Abigail Severance is a second marriage and that Joseph³ Abbe had by a previous marriage had a son Joseph, who was born in 1700 or earlier and lived later in Ipswich, Mass.

judge of the county court, and treasurer of the county. He represented Windham in the Legislature from 1726 to 1737 with one year's exception, and was influential in the church. In 1726 it was ordered at a meeting of the justices "that Mr. Richard Abbe's back-room in his dwelling-house shall be a common gaol till the new one be built." In 1727 he opened his stately mansion as an inn for public entertainment and received a license. In 1736 Richard Abbe, Esq., of Windham, was one of the subscribers to the Chronological History of New England, by Thomas Prince, M.A., of Boston. At his death, his "books of all sorts" were appraised at £29-18-10. His will, dated June 27, 1737, probated September 5, 1737, makes the following bequests: to wife Mary, one-half his moneys, goods and chattels; to brother Obadiah, land in Ashford where he now dwells, to descend to his son Richard, reserving the use of one-third part to Elizabeth, wife of said Obadiah, and if said Richard should die before his father or mother not having lawful heirs, the land should descend "to the heirs of my Cozon Obadiah Abbe of Willington"; to Reverend Mr. Clap, minister of the first church in Windham, £5; to the church, £20. 10. MARY³ ABBE, daughter of John² and Hannah () Abbe, born in Wenham, Mass., September 16, 1684; baptized there before 1685. Lived in Somers and Enfield.

Some authorities have given Mary, wife of James Pease, as the daughter of Thomas and Sarah (Fairfield) Abbe of Enfield. But Mary, the daughter of Thomas and Sarah, died in Wenham, Mass., October 15, 1705 (Wenham Vital Records). Moreover, Richard Abbe, son of John and Hannah () Abbe, in his will mentions his sister Mary, ye wife of James Pease. Her mother divided land belonging to her first husband, John Abbe, among his children, June 16, 1710, using these words, "moved by the love and affection I bore to my beautifull daughter Mary Abbe."

Married November (or October) 15, 1710, JAMES PEASE, born in Salem,

Mass., 1677 or 1679, son of John, jr., and Margaret (Adams) Pease. The first of the Pease family in America was Robert, who married Marie ———, father of John Pease, sr., called the father of Enfield. John Pease, sr., married Mary Goodell and had a son, Captain John Pease, jr., a member of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Boston, served in the Colonial Wars, and married Margaret Adams, daughter of James and Frances (Vassall) Adams. James Adams was a son of John Adams, who came to the Plymouth Colony in the ship Fortune in 1621, and his wife Eleanor Newton. James Pease removed with his father to Enfield when he was a child, was living in Enfield in 1710, and in Somers in 1713. He served as sergeant in one of the military companies.

Children, born in Enfield

- Mary Pease*, b. Oct. 8, 1711.
 27 James Pease, b. May 4, 1713; m. Abigail Ford.
Margaret Pease, b. May 16, 1715.
 28 Richard Pease, b. Sept. 22, 1717; m. Elizabeth Parsons.
Hannah Pease, b. April 20, 1722.
John Pease, b. June 19, 1725; d. July 25, 1730.

11. JOHN³ ABBE, son of John² and Hannah () Abbe, born in Wenham, Mass., April 20, 1691; baptized there 1691; died in Windham, Conn., January 16, 1770. Records pertaining to John Abbe of Windham are necessarily somewhat indefinite as there were several of the name living there at the same period. This was perhaps the John Abbe who was a proprietor in the drawing of a twenty-acre lot in 1707. He is probably the John Abbe of Norwich to whom, April 1, 1714, heirs of John Abbe make deed; Lydia Abbe, Thomas and Hannah Welch, Hannah Abbe, Richard Abbe, Daniel Sabin, and James Pease. (Windham Deeds, Liber F, page 183, etc.) In 1752 he bought property in Union, the homestead of Nathaniel Gould, also land of Nathaniel Walker and Joshua Webb. His name occurs in Union land transfers several times between 1754, when he made over property to his son Richard, and 1764. His will, dated June 6, 1767, was probated February 2, 1770. It mentions his wife, Sarah; to son John, whose wife is Lois, land in Windham; grandson, John, son of above John; to son, Richard, land on Beaver Hill in Windham; daughter, Hannah, who married Joshua Webb; to daughters Mary, Elizabeth, Eunice and Tabitha, lands in Windham; to his friend Reverend Mr. Stephen White of Windham, silver-headed cane. The inventory amounted to £1067, 12s, 6d, with land valued at £949, 15s. (Windham Probate Records, Vol. 8, page 41.)

John Abbe married (1) in Windham, November 7, 1717, MARY BINGHAM, born December 17, 1697, at Stratford, Conn.; died July 23, 1722. She was the daughter of Deacon Abel and Elizabeth (Odell) Bingham of Windham.

Married (2) March 12, 1723, in Windham, MARY PALMER, born December 17, 1691, at Rehoboth, Mass.; died May 30, 1750, in Windham; buried there. She was daughter of Samuel and Elizabeth (Kingsley) Palmer.

Married (3) April 23, 1751, MRS. ABIGAIL (CARY) RIPLEY, died October 16, 1766; buried in Windham. She was daughter of Deacon Eleazer and Lydia () Cary, and widow of Jeremiah Ripley, jr.

Married (4) April 8, 1767, MRS. SARAH DODGE, died April 11, 1776. She was perhaps the widow of Isaac Dodge.

Child by first wife

- 29 John Abbe, b. July 4, 1722; m. (1) Lois Munson; (2) ——— Smith.

Thomas Welch took up the 1000 acres of land on Beaver Hill and Beaver Brook about three miles east of Windham on the road leading to Hampton. He married (2) before 1774, Mrs. Rachel (Huntington) Bingham, widow of Joseph Bingham. Thomas Welch died August 14, 1781, and was buried in Windham. Christopher gave to his son Benjamin his home farm in the northeast part of Windham. Benjamin Bidlack was a merchant, probably the first one in his section of the town, Canada Parish. The opening items are: a wigg Christian hair, s15; a brown wigg Christian hair, s5; a white wigg, hors hair, etc. (Windham Probate Records, Vol. 2, page 358.)

Captain James Bidlack, who may have been the James mentioned above, married Abigail Fuller, daughter of Stephen Fuller, and emigrated to Susquehanna, Pa. He, with Robert Durkee and Samuel Ransom, was taken captive by the Indians, March 24, 1779. He was stripped, tied to a tree, stuck full of sharp splints of pine knots; then, having piled pine knots around him, the Indians set fire to the whole, piled the other two men on the fire, held them down with pitchforks and tortured them until they expired.

Sarah Bidlack, perhaps a sister or daughter of Captain James Bidlack, married Stephen Fuller, jr., brother of Abigail Fuller. He, with others, was taken by Indians in the Wyoming battle, July 3, 1778, was led to a wheat field, where the Indians piled around them sheaves of wheat and burned them to death. The fort was taken and fired, most of the women and children perishing in the flames. Mrs. Fuller, with some others, went in boats down the Susquehanna to Northumberland. About two weeks later she returned to look for the body of her husband but found the bodies so mutilated as to be unrecognizable. Her home had been despoiled of everything. She later returned to Hampton, Conn., on horseback, with her only daughter, Polly, who was then two or three years old. Polly Fuller afterward married Judge Ebenezer Griffin of Hampton. Sarah (Bidlack) Fuller married (2) Asa Abbott and had children.

14. SAMUEL³ ABBE, JR., son of Samuel² and Mary (Knowlton) Abbe, born about 1676, probably in Wenham, Mass.; baptized there 1679. He died in Windham, Conn., January 15, 1736-7, aged about 61. He was on the tax-list of Salem Village January 18, 1694-5; and was one of the original members of the First Congregational Church at Windham, Conn., December 10, 1700. He was among Windham's active and influential citizens and succeeded to the estate of his father at Windham Centre. A Samuel Abbe of Windsor bought land in Windham of Obid Abbe in 1714. His will, March 3, 1731-2, probated February 23, 1736-7, left everything to his wife, Hannah. (Windham Probate Records, Vol. 2, page 144.)

He removed with his father to the locality known as "Bricktop" in 1698; worked in Norwich for a time, about 1705; was at Windham in 1706 and later lived at North Windham and Mansfield. November, 1705, were recorded two deeds showing an exchange of property between Samuel Abbe and Ebenezer of Norwich, a lot upon Bushnell's Plain. He received a deed from Samuel, July 17, 1707, and sold land to Abraham Mitchell and William Slate in 1709 and 1711. October 29, 1713, John Abbe, "now resident at Hartford, in Hartford County," sold to his brother Ebenezer land he had received from his father, Samuel Abbe of Windham. In a deed of November 2, 1713, he alludes to his deceased father, Samuel Abbe, January 11, 1714, land bought from his brother, Samuel Abbe, and calls Abraham Mitchell "father." He is found frequently in the records of Windham down to late in life. September 8, 1742, he sold to his son, Samuel, land on the east side of Nauehaug River in Windham. In 1715, Ebenezer Abbe was one of the settlers who formed Canada Parish at Hampton Hill in the northeast part of Windham, and was one of those who on May 9, 1717, signed a petition to the General Assembly asking to be made a separate parish. In October of the same year another petition was sent to the Assembly, asking that the taxes on property in this parish should be used for the establishing of their church. This petition was signed by "Ebenezer Abbe, for the rest," and William Durkee.

His will, dated June 3, 1750, probated December 14, 1758, names these heirs: wife Mary; children Ebenezer, Joshua, Nathan, Gideon, Samuel, Elizabeth Cross, Zeruiah Marsh, Jerusha Wood, Abigail Cary, Miriam Cross; grandson Jonathan Bingham, only surviving son and heir of his daughter Mary, deceased. (Windham Probate Records, Vol. 5, page 513.)

18. JOHN³ ABBE, son of Samuel² and Mary (Knowlton) Abbe, born in Salem Village, Mass., June 4, 1692; died in East Hartford, Conn., October 30, 1790. He was a resident of Hartford as early as 1710 or 1713. John Abbe, resident at Hartford, sold to his brother Ebenezer, land formerly belonging to their father, Samuel Abbe, of Windham, October 29, 1713. (Windham Deeds, Liber D, page 328.) March 12, 1718, he purchased from Benjamin Hills of Hartford, 8 acres on the "east side of the Great River." There were several John Abbes living at this period so that it is sometimes hard to tell which one is meant, but the following records seem to pertain to this one. March 3, 1731, he joined with several others in giving a deed to the Town of Hartford for a highway which was later known as Silver Lane and on which his house stood. (Hartford Deeds, Vols. 5, page 307, and 3, page 164.) John Abbe of East Hartford was one of the inhabitants of that town to protest against a tax in 1769; signed a paper with others regarding their desire to settle in what was known as "Western town" in 1733; was a proprietor in the Western land and signed a Tolland petition. (Connecticut State Archives, State Library, Towns and Lands, IX, 278b, with his autograph, V, 238e, V, 23b, and VII, 13.) Deeds made by him were recorded in Hartford, 1736, 1738, 1748, 1754, 1759, 1765, and 1770. The most important of these is that of January 15, 1759 (Hartford Deeds, 13, page 37), by which he conveys land to his son Nehemiah Abbe of Hartford. The name is spelled in various ways on the early records, Abbe, Abby and Abbey, but the latter seems to have been in most frequent use among the later descendants of his family.

Married HANNAH ———,

Children

58 Stephen Abbey, b. about 1727; m. Mary (or Marah) ———.

59 Eleazer Abbey, m. Mary ———.

60 Nehemiah Abbey, m. Mabel Warren.

Naomi Abbey.

Sarah Abbey. These last two names are included in this list of children for the following reason. In a deed recorded in Hartford, Oct. 26, 1759 (Volume 9, page 559), John Abbe, junr., Solomon Hills and Sarah, his wife, and Naomi Abbe convey land in Hartford to George and John Buck of Wethersfield.

19. BENJAMIN³ ABBE, son of Samuel² and Mary (Knowlton) Abbe, born in Salem Village, Mass., June 4, 1694; died about 1765. He probably removed with his family to Windham, Conn., and from there to Glastonbury, where his name appears on lists of freemen, 1718-35. He filled the offices of hayward, grand juryman, collector of rates, fence-viewer and tything man. In 1737 he was admitted to the First Ecclesiastical Society of Chatham or East Middletown, and his wife Mary, in 1741. He was appointed guardian of Daniel Andruss of Middletown, 1748. April 24, 1749, he deeded land "on the east side of the Great River" to his son Samuel. His will, filed in Middletown, was made December 4, 1754; probated October 15, 1765. Inventory was recorded November 20, 1765. His will names his wife Mary; son Samuel; daughters Agnes Bidwell and Lydia Abbe; grandchildren John, Ebenezer, Agnes and Lucy Miller; grandchildren Moses, Samuel, John and William Cornwell.

20. JONATHAN³ ABBE, son of Samuel² and Mary (Knowlton) Abbe, born in Wenham, Mass., about 1697; settled in Willington, Conn., where he died May 3, 1757. The following records from the Ashford land books probably refer to this Jonathan Abbe: 1719, 100 acres of land from John Follett; 1721, 10 acres from Joseph Oreutt, adjacent to land of previous deed; 1761 and 1764, references to holdings of land; 1764, land from Azariah Sanger, Elizabeth Sanger and Joseph Abbe. (Ashford Deeds, B, 133; E, 119; K, 272, 433.) The inventory of his estate was entered in Hartford, June 2, 1757, by William Arent, James Comins, and Abner Barker, appraisers. (Hartford Probate Records, 17; 32, 18; 86.) The estate consisted of 106 acres of land, with utensils and household goods to the amount of £381-5-4. The Court granted administration upon the estate to Jonathan Abbe of Willington, who was also appointed guardian for Mary, aged about 11 years, and Rebekah, aged about 3 years, minor children of said Jonathan Abbe. The estate was ordered to be distributed March 4, 1760, the widow having quitted her right to any of the estate. "To Jonathan Abbe eldest son a Double Shair of s^d Estate and to Samuel, Anna, Mary and Rebekah Abbe an equall single Shair."

25. JOANNA⁴ ABBE, daughter of Joseph³ and Abigail (Severance) Abbe, born November 15, 1706, probably in Salisbury, Mass.; died September 7, 1757, in Kensington, N. H. She was mentioned in the will of her uncle, Richard Abbe of Windham, Conn., in 1737. The choice of Joanna Abbe of her stepfather as guardian is on file at Essex. "I Joanna Abbe of Salisbury, daughter of Joseph Abbe deceased and wife Abigail, born 15 nov., 1706, do desire that my father in law Mr. Philip Greele should be my guardian. Dated 5 Oct., 1724." Acknowledged before Wm. Bradbury and witnessed by Jarvis Ring, jr. A seal attached shows a griffin rampant.

Married in the 2d Church in Salisbury, February 17, 1726, JONATHAN BROWN, born in Hampton, N. H., February 24, 1700; died July 10, 1766. He was son of Jacob and Sarah (Brookings) Brown and a direct descendant of John Brown, an early immigrant to America, of Scottish descent but born in London. There has been much confusion among the Browns in tracing ancestry, due to the fact that Joshua Brown, a descendant of Richard Brown, married Joanna Morrill, on December 8, 1726, in the 2d Church in Salisbury, Mass. the same church in which, on February 17, 1726, Jonathan Brown had married Joanna Abbe. Then after the death of Joanna Abbe Brown, her husband married, on November 30, 1758, Mrs. Joanna (Morrill) Brown, widow of Joshua. Joshua and Joanna (Morrill) Brown had at least eight children, and Jonathan and Joanna (Abbe) Brown, ten, but there were no children by the second marriage of Jonathan Brown to Mrs. Joanna (Morrill) Brown. Most of the records of this family are found in John R. Eastman's History of Andover, New Hampshire.

26. OBADIAH⁴ ABBE, son of Obadiah³ and Elizabeth (Wilkinson) Abbe, born in Windham, Conn., April 10, 1704. He is doubtless the one called "my Cozon Obadiah Abbe of Willington" in the will of Richard³ Abbe of Windham, 1737. Various land transactions in Ashford, 1725, Obediah of Willington to Richard Abbe of Windham, 1731, Obediah to Richard Abbe, may refer to him. January 20, 1768, was made a deed from Obadiah of Ashford to his brother Richard, of the same town, land in the westerly part of the town of Ashford descended by the will of Richard Abbe of Windham "to the heirs of my honored Father Obediah Abbe of Willington." January 19, 1768, Ruth Abbe of Willington transfers property to Obediah of Ashford, land descended from her uncle Richard of Windham. In 1767 Jeremiah Abbe received land from his brother Obadiah, both being sons of Obadiah. [Ashford Town Records F, 11, 12, 26, 74, 75, 76, 78; K, 49; L, 197, 253, 290, 291, 400.] The names of Obadiah and Jeremiah Abbe are among the signers of an Ashford petition regarding the church, 1765. remained there till about 1760, when he removed to Ashford. With other members of his family he was one of the patentees of the township of Norwich, Vt., which was organized at Mansfield, Conn., August 21, 1761, but it is doubtful if any of them became actual settlers. There is a tradition that he served in the French and Indian War. In 1763 he was commissioned captain of the 12th Company, 5th Regiment, Connecticut Colonial forces. December 14, 1769, he was appointed to correspond with other committees in the county and elsewhere to encourage and forward manufactures and the spirit of industry in this government, also to see that no goods were imported into Ashford. Family traditions and names prove that Hezekiah, Mason, and Richard were also his sons and there were doubtless others. In his will he left a farm of 90 acres on Beaver Hill in Windham to his son Merari or Mexari. He is said to have been an officer in the Revolution.

56. JOHN^t PALMER, son of Samuel and Hepsibah^s (Abbe) Palmer, born in Windham, Conn., March 6, 1720-1; died August 13, 1807. He was a member of the Church in Scotland, Windham County, Conn., at the time of the Separate movement. For too free exercise of his gift of exhortation, he was summarily arrested by the civil authority and kept in Hartford jail four months, only increasing his zeal, devotion, and opposition to the established churches. After further trial, the church united in calling him to its ministry, and on May 17, 1749, he was ordained its pastor. "Though deficient in education and somewhat rough in speech and manner, Mr. Palmer was a man of estimable character and sound piety, and under his guidance the Brunswick church, as it was called, maintained for many years a good standing in the community, comparatively free from those excesses and fanaticisms which marred so many of its contemporaries. No difficulty was found in supporting its worship by voluntary contributions. A church edifice was built a mile or so southeast of Scotland Village, long known as the Brunswick meeting-house. Mr. Devotion (pastor of the established church) was never reconciled to this intrusion within his parochial diocese, but was accustomed every Sunday morning to send his negro servant with a rescript to the Brunswick meeting-house, forbidding Mr. Palmer or any other unauthorized person to preach therein that day—a prohibition which only served to increase the number of attendants and fan the spirit of separation and opposition."

57. JOHN⁴ ABBE, JR., son of John³ and Hannah () Abbe, born 1724 or earlier, probably in East Hartford, Conn.; died there about 1763. His name appears frequently upon the deeds of that town, beginning in 1745 when his father, John Abbe, transferred some property to him. In 1754 he received a grant of 3 acres in the town distribution. In 1759 John Abbe, jr., Solomon Hills and Sarah, his wife, and Naomi Abbe, deeded land in Hartford to George and John Buck of Wethersfield. (Hartford Deeds, 7, 226; 8, 22; 14, 348; 9, 559; 10, 247.) He was collector of the town in 1748, and signed petitions in 1748. He was a private in the 2d Company, 1st Regiment, raised by Lieutenant-Colonel John Pitkin for the reduction of Crown Point, April, 1755, serving for 28 weeks. March 2, 1763, the Court granted administration on his estate to Nehemiah Abbe of Hartford, who exhibited the inventory May 3, 1763. (Hartford Probate Records, 19, pages 55, 67, 111.)

December 13, 1771, there was a transfer of land "set out to the said Ruth Abbee as part of the estate of Caleb Goodwin deceased." A deed of September 13, 1782, speaks of her as "our honored mother Ruth Abbe deceased." Administration upon her estate was granted to her son, John Abbe, jr., of Hartford, May 28, 1782, and the inventory of the estate was recorded in October of the same year. It is an interesting document, containing such items as: Great Bible 3/; 3 old books 1/6; silk erape gown 9/6; silk hoods and velvet ones; string of gold beads 54/; extensive list of dishes of all kinds and glass ware; Dwelling house £72; Home Lott 5 acres £20; 4 acres pasture £16; 12½ acres woodland £62-10; 3 acres meadow land £25-10; 7½ acres of woodland £48-15. 58. STEPHEN⁴ ABBEY, son of John³ and Hannah () Abbe, born probably at East Hartford, Conn., about 1727; died there March 26, 1798, aged 71. The first mention of him in the deeds of Hartford is in 1749, then in 1754, with reference to land on the west side of the "Great River." Later transactions were of 1760, 1761, and 1765. (Hartford Deeds, 7, page 541; 8, pages 26 and 111; 9, page 388; 10, pages 36, 37, 174; 12, page 436.) His home was on the east side of the "Great River." Administration was granted upon his estate, July 6, 1798, to Jonathan Stanley of East Hartford. The brief inventory, recorded July 9, 1798, gave a total of £204-12-9. The widow, Mary, received a share. Among the sales was one to "Theodore Abby 1 acre & half Home lot, being the same that was set to wid^o Mary Abby as dower in s^d estate." (Hartford Probate Records, Vol. 25, 199, 220, 237; Vol. 26, 63.) His name appears as signer of petitions regarding East Hartford lands. (Connecticut Archives, State Library, IX, 281d, with autograph.) He was collector of the town in 1755. In 1791 there was an epidemic of small-pox and there was a fad, which proved to be short-lived, of whole families inoculating themselves with the disease and retiring into seclusion. Stephen Abbey with several others petitioned the town for permission to do this in April, 1791. The privilege was taken away by the authorities in September of the same year, but we have no record to show that the petitioners really tried the experiment and with what results.

Married MARY (or MARAH) ———. There was a widow Mary Abbey who died in East Hartford, February 1, 1804, and one who died April 10, 1809.

War, and 3 lead pounds and 6 flints were delivered to him. (Connecticut Historical Society Collections, IX, 84.) He is credited with 5 days' service under Captain Ebenezer Wallisant, dated April 2, 1778. (Vermont Revolutionary War Rolls.) The records of the Pension Office at Washington show that Eleazer Abbe entered the service in the 3d Connecticut Regiment, April 16, 1778, and was discharged from the 1st Regiment, September 29, 1781; he was a resident of East Hartford in 1788; bounty land warrant No. 267 for 100 acres was allowed on this service and was delivered to Joel Barlow, April 25, 1805. He is doubtless the Eleazer Abbe of the 1790 Census in Danby, Rutland County, Vt., one male over 16, one under 16, 3 females in family. One of his family may have been Benjamin Abbey, recorded in the 1800 Census in Rutland, 1 male and 1 female between 26 and 45, 5 boys and 1 girl under 10.

60. NEHEMIAH⁴ ABBEY, son of John³ and Hannah () Abbe, born probably in East Hartford, Conn.; died there, probably November 22, 1813. Earliest mention of him is in deed of January 15, 1759, by which John Abbe conveys property to his son Nehemiah Abbe. He figured in other deeds of 1764, 1770 and 1771. (Hartford Deeds, 12, 217, 218; 13, 11, 257; 14, 349; 15, 117.) His signature is among inhabitants of East Hartford who enter a protest against taxes in 1769. (Connecticut State Archives, Towns and Lands, IX, 278b.) He served 16 days in Captain William Wadsworth's Company in 1757. He was collector in East Hartford in 1768. The 1790 Census gives Nehemiah of East Hartford one male over 21, two males under 21, five females in family. In 1800 he is recorded with 1 male and 1 female over 45, 1 male between 26 and 45, 2 females between 16 and 26 and 1 male under 10 in the family.

side of the Great River" at Middletown, Conn.; was also party to deeds, 1758 and 1759. He was a store-keeper and kept the old "Abbey Tavern." In the Census of 1790, he is given in Chatham, Conn., 3 males over 21, 1 male under 21, 3 females in family. In 1800 he has 2 males and 1 female over 45, 1 male and 1 female between 16 and 26. His first enlistment noted is as Corporal in the 3d Company, 1st Regiment, May 25 to November 22, 1758; then as Lieutenant in the 7th Company, 1st Regiment, under Captain Seth King, April 1 to December 1, 1761. (Connecticut Historical Society Collections, X, pages 10 and 247.) He was commissioned captain, January 1, 1777.

In his "Quest of Ancestors," Mr. Alden Freeman says:

That long line of warlike Abbeys beginning with John, who came in the "Bonaventure" and settled in Salem in 1636; his son Thomas, who settled in Enfield after King Phillip's War; his grandson, Lieutenant Thomas Abbey, and his great-grandson, Thomas Abbey, ensign and lieutenant in the French and Indian Wars and afterward captain under Washington throughout the Revolutionary War, whose service I was invited to represent in the Connecticut Society of the Cincinnati. On the Thursday following the battle of Lexington, Thomas Abbey, on learning of the fight, procured a drum and actually drummed the people out of the meeting-house at Enfield, where they were gathered at their regular weekday lecture.

This interesting event was beautifully commemorated by a poem written by Benjamin F. Taylor, and published in the Atlantic Monthly in May, 1878, and the following is a copy of the poem:

THE CAPTAIN'S DRUM

In Pilgrim land, one Sabbath day,
The winter lay like sheep about
The ragged pastures mullein gray;
The April sun shone in and out,
The showers swept by in fitful flocks,
And eaves ticked fast like mantel clocks;

And now and then a wealthy cloud
Would wear a ribbon broad and bright,
And now and then a winged crowd
Of shivering azure flash in sight.
So rainbows bend and bluebirds fly
And violets show their bits of sky.

To Enfield church throng all the town,
In quilted hood and bombazine,
In beaver hat and flaring crown,
And quaint vandyke and victorine;
And buttoned boys in roundabout
From calyx collars blossom out;

Bandanas wave their feeble fire,
And foot-stoves tinkle up the aisle;
A gray-haired elder leads the choir,
And girls in linscy-woolsey smile.
So back to life the beings glide
Whose very graves have ebbcd and died.

One hundred years have waned, and yet
We call the roll, and not in vain,
For one whose flint-lock musket set
The echoes wild around Fort Duquesne,
And smelled the battle's powder smoke
Ere Revolution's thunders woke.

Lo, Thomas Abbey answers, "Here!"

Within the dull long-metre place,
That day, upon the parson's ear,
And trampling down his words of grace,
A horseman's gallop rudely beat
Along the splashed and empty street.

The rider drew his dripping rein,
And then a letter, wasp-nest gray,
That ran: "The Concord minute-men
And red-coats had a fight to-day!
To Captain Abbey this with speed."
Twelve little words to tell the deed.

The captain read, struck out for home
The old quickstep of battle born,
Slung on once more a battered drum
That bore a painted unicorn
Then right-about, as whirls a torch,
He stood before the sacred porch.

And then a murmuring of bees
Broke in upon the house of prayer;
And then a wind-song swept the trees,
And then a snarl from wolfish lair;
And then a charge of grenadiers,
And then a flight of drum-beat cheers.

So drum and doctrine rudely blent,
The casements rattled strange accord;
No mortal knew what either meant;
'Twas double-grad and Holy Word,
Thus saith the drum, and thus the Lord.
The captain raised so wild a rout
He drummed the congregation out.

The people gathered round amazed;
The soldier bared his head and spoke,
And every sentence burned and blazed,
As trenchant as a sabre stroke:
" 'Tis time to pick the flint to-day,
To sling the knapsack, and away!

"The green of Lexington is red
With British red-coats, brothers' blood!
In rightful cause the earliest dead
Are always best beloved of God.
Mark time! Now let the march begin!
All bound for Boston fall right in!"

Then rub-a-dub the drum jarred on,
The throbbing roll of battle beat;
"Fall in, my men!" and one by one
They rhymed the tune with heart and feet,
And so they made a Sabbath march
To glory 'neath the elm-tree arch.

The Continental line unwound
Along the Church-yard's breathless sod,
And holier grew the hallowed ground
Where Virtue slept and Valor trod,
Two hundred strong that April day
They rallied out and marched away.

Brigaded there at Bunker Hill,
Their names are writ on Glory's page.
The brave old captain's Sunday drill
Has drummed its way across the age.

FACSIMILE AUTOGRAPH OF CAPTAIN THOMAS ABBEY

THE TOWN HALL OF ENFIELD
(Used as the Meeting House, 1775-1818)

The church around which Captain Abbey beat the long roll was completed in the January preceeding, and stood near the present church. It was used as a church for the town until 1849, when it was bought by the town and moved to the west side of the street, where it now stands and has been used as a town hall ever since. A memorial to Captain Abbey and others of the family is about to be erected by Mr. Alden Freeman with his mother and sisters.

The Abbey Memorial will be on the Green in Enfield, on the site of the church out of which Captain Abbey drummed the congregation at the Lexington Alarm. The actual site of the old church is just in front of the present edifice. The design calls for a marble statue on a pedestal surrounded by four marble seats in the Greek style. On the backs of these seats are inscriptions commemorating the achievements of some of the best known descendants of the Abbey family, in the fields of war, literature and science. The sculptor, Sherry E. Fry, used as a model for the face and figure for the statue of Captain Abbey, a daguerreotype of his grandson, Seth Alden Abbey, taken at the same age. Daniel C. French, sculptor of the "Minute Men" unveiled at Concord Bridge in 1875, has taken great interest in the work of Mr. Fry, and loaned him the simple Colonial suit used for the presentation of Captain Abbey.

The following is an extract from a letter written by Seth Alden⁶ Abbey to his son, Henry G. Abbey, dated June 15, 1872, telling something of Thomas Abbey:

When a small boy, I was frequently at his house for a week at a time and have heard him tell many a thrilling tale of his hairbreadth escapes, hardships, sufferings, etc. During the French War he received a commission as Ensign in the Colonial troops and saw considerable service against the French and Indians. At the breaking out of the Revolution, a volunteer company was formed in his neighborhood and he was elected their captain and they were soon ordered to join Colonel Willett's Regiment in New York. I have heard him say, frequently, that he had chances of promotion, often, but his men would not consent to his leaving them. When a boy I saw many of his old soldiers who had served during the war; and the neighbors were as particular in addressing any of them, in giving them their title, as Corporal such a one, or Sergeant such a one, as they would be in addressing a General. Thomas Abbey died in 1811, and was as anxious for a fight with old England, which was then much talked of, just before his death, as in his younger days. He died suddenly with apoplexy.

Captain Thomas⁴ Abbe married in Enfield, June 22, 1749, PENELOPE TERRY, born in Enfield, February 5, 1729-30; died there December 2, 1817. She was the daughter of Dr. (or Captain) Ebenezer and Mary (Helms) Terry.

In July the Regiment was adopted as "Continental," and was engaged at the Battle of Bunker Hill. (Some of these later records may refer to his son John⁵.) Being disappointed and discouraged, he determined to return to Tolland. He consulted, however, with friends at Walpole, and finally made a purchase near the west line in Alstead, N. H., where his wife's sister, Martha, had removed after her marriage. He, with his son, John, came on to the land, which was covered with heavy timber, and the first tree that was felled parted a limb which struck his head and injured him severely. He was carried by his son to Walpole, where he in a measure recovered, though he was never perfectly restored to his former health.

114. RACHEL⁵ ABBE, daughter of Joshua⁴ and Mary (Ripley) Abbe, born February 6, 1738-9, in North Windham, Conn.; died June 22, 1795, buried in Woodstock, Conn. A lasting memorial of her patriotism aroused by the news of Lexington in April, 1775, is found in Woodstock.

Rachel Abbe of Windham, now Mrs. Samuel McClellan, shared in the patriotic fervor which so characterized the women of her native town, and after fitting out her husband and his horsemen, she set out memorial trees in honor of the joyful occasion. Four sapling elms brought up on horseback from the old Windham homestead, were carefully transplanted into the soil of Woodstock—two in front of her dwelling and two on the slope of the adjoining common. Nurtured with care and pains they soon took root and flourished and for more than an hundred years have told the story of Lexington. True trees of Liberty, they have grown up with the Nation, and still stand in majestic beauty, living witnesses to the patriotism and devotion of the women of Windham County.

Married in Windham, as his second wife, March 5, 1766, SAMUEL MC CLELLAN, born January 4, 1730, in Worcester, Mass.; died September 17, 1807, in Woodstock, Conn.; buried there. His parents emigrated from Kireudbright, on the Firth of Solway in Scotland. He married (1) November 16, 1757, Jemima Chandler, by whom he had children: Samuel, William, Lemuel and Polly. He married (3) July 3, 1798, Mrs. Eunice Folunsbee of Worcester.

Samuel McClellan served as Ensign and Lieutenant of a company in the French war and was wounded in battle. Upon his return from the provincial campaign he purchased a farm in Woodstock, married and settled there. He later engaged in mercantile business and established an extensive trade, importing his own goods and supplying neighboring merchants. When the Revolution put a stop to his trade he trained and equipped the county militia. A fine troop of horse was raised in Woodstock, Pomfret and Killingly, of which he became commander. He rose by promotions until 1784 when he was Brigadier-General of the 5th Brigade, Connecticut militia. In 1776 his regiment was ordered into service and stationed in and about New Jersey. He was solicited by General Washington to join the Continental Army and was offered an important commission but his domestic and business affairs compelled him to refuse. After the invasion and burning of New London and the massacre at Fort Groton, he was appointed over the troops stationed at those points and continued the command until the close of the war, acting as commissary in the purchase and forwarding of provisions for the army when not otherwise in active service. He returned to mercantile business after the war but soon gave it up to manage his extensive estates. He was highly esteemed as a Christian gentleman and was honored by his townsmen by many important offices.

In memory of SHUBAEL ABBE, Esq., who died suddenly April 16, 1804, aged 59. He graduated at Yale College in 1764. He was several years in the business of merchandise, and by his own exertion became largely engaged in husbandry. In 1783 he was appointed Sheriff of the County of Windham and continued in the most unexceptionable manner to discharge the duties of that office till his death. He was often chosen a Representative of the town, in 1798, he was appointed by the President one of the Commissioners of the land tax. And by the Assembly one of the Committee to manage the school funds. In domestic life he was indulgent and decisive. In public business, active, punctual, and correct. In his attachment to civil and religious institutions he was exemplary, and to the poor and afflicted humane and generous. His abilities and integrity secured to him the esteem and confidence of his fellow Citizens, and his death was extensively and deeply regretted.

He left a widow, three sons and five daughters to mourn an irreparable loss.

Tears flow nor cease where Abbe's ashes sleep,
For him a wife and tenderest children weep,
And Justly—for few shall ever him transcend,
A husband, parent, and a faithful friend.

He received the degree A.B. from Yale College in 1764 and A.M. in 1767.

His inventory, taken May 8, 1804, denotes an estate of $29,412.85; papers mentioning the widow and children. (Windham Probate Records, Vol. 15, pages 111, 176, 362, 468.)

118. PHINEAS⁵ ABBE, son of Joshua⁴ and Mary (Ripley) Abbe, born November 22, 1746, in North Windham, Conn.; died June 19, 1800. Mr. Phineas Abbe Departed this Life 17th day of June on Tuesday in the afternoon at four o'clock in the 54 year of his age 1800. (Bible Record.) He was a respected and prosperous farmer of Windham, took an active part in all matters of public welfare, held various civil offices, including that of jailer. During the Revolution he had at one time some English prisoners who ornamented the wall of their room or cell with a fine large picture of their ship. It was later revealed that this was only to conceal efforts they were making to remove a portion of the wall and make their escape. When they finally succeeded in getting away, they left word to their jailer that they were about to sail soon.

At his death his property was inventoried at $9,919.40, with 325 acres of land. The inventory, taken October 12, 1801, is a most interesting document with its long enumeration of articles of furniture and wearing apparel, among which were chairs and tables of several kinds, six fiddle-back chairs, silver knee-buckles and plated shoe-buckles. The property was distributed to the widow, Susannah, and children: Mary Taintor, Joshua, Lucy, Thomas, George, Charles, Moses, Lucius, Henry and Samuel. (Windham Probate Records, Vol. 14, pages 435, 480, 519.) His homestead was south of Windham Centre, owned later by his son George.

Married (1) in Windham, December 7, 1767, MARY BINGHAM, born September 24, 1746, at Canterbury, Conn.; died in Windham, July 29, 1777. Deacon Thomas was the son of Thomas and Mary () Bingham of Sheffield, Yorkshire, England.

Thomas Brown, a Revolutionary officer, and his wife, Sarah Bishop of Lisbon, Conn. Her will was made April 5, 1804, and the property distributed to her sons, George, Charles, Moses, Lucius, Henry and Samuel, on September 23, 1808. (Windham Probate Records, 15:104, 114, 442.)

120. JOSHUA⁵ ABBE, JR., son of Joshua⁴ and Mary (Ripley) Abbe, born in Windham, Conn., January 9, 1751. He was a man of strong religious impulses, opposed to orthodox preaching, and became a preacher of the Christian denomination, or, as it was at times called, the Congregational Baptist. In 1826 he was on the register of preachers. Larned's History of Windham County, page 221, Vol. 2, says this:

In the north part of Windham, which was now becoming a populous neighborhood, a remarkable worship was conducted by Joshua Abbe. Rev. Moses Cook Welch of Mansfield represented "these Abbe-ites as a sect of Baptists, differing from any and all of that denomination that had ever risen in any age, having no communication even with other Baptist churches. Their meetings were characterized by jargon, disorder and great confusion; all were allowed to speak at pleasure, women as well as men, three, four, or six sometimes speaking at once, while groans, sobs, and sighs were reiterated by others."

As the Rev. Moses Cook Welch was an orthodox preacher of the same neighborhood and entered into violent controversy over these unorthodox preachers, we may believe that this account may have been somewhat colored by his personal feelings.

In the Census of 1800, he is doubtless the Joshua Abbe of Windham, with a family of 15.

Joshua Abbe resided in North Windham on his father's home farm and later emigrated to Leroy, N. Y., where he died. A settlement was made between his widow and George W. Abbe, administrator, October 15, 1836. (Windham Probate Records, Vol. 21, page 38.)

He built for his own accommodation the "Windham," a brisk little craft, with a huge frog cut in its bow for a figure-head, in memory of the famous Windham frog scare of 1754. Like many others, his commercial ventures had been destroyed by British invaders and he was energetic among those who were upholding the government in 1812. With a family of nine he was recorded in the 1800 Census; in 1810 with four. He served as constable and collector of state taxes. About 1818 he was one of the selectmen of his town. One of his descendants, Mr. Gehial Hall Abbey, has the chest which he carried during his service in the Revolution. On April 19, 1818, William Abbey applied for a pension, at that time being a resident of Onondaga County, N. Y. In pension papers of 1820, mention was made of his children: Nathan, aged 33; Isabel, aged 22; Lydia, aged 20; and a grandchild, Eunice Abbe, "all of which I provide for and support besides myself, who have not done a day's work this twelve years past on account of infirmity." In spite of this infirmity, he seems to have been well-to-do, as he owned property worth $68.75 and owed but $12.00. His name is on the tablet in memory of the Revolutionary soldiers of Onondaga County, in the Post Office at Syracuse. The Census of 1790 records him at Duanesburg, Albany County, N. Y., and purchased property; named in a deed of 1807. In the winter of 1830 he removed to Ohio and January 15, 1831, found him on Butternut Ridge, North Eaton, Ohio, with his large family and worldly effects on two wagons, drawn by one span of horses and one of oxen, with but seventy-five cents in his pocket, which he paid out for a bushel of wheat. He purchased land in Carlisle Township and Eaton and is said to have hauled the first load of wheat from Wayne County, Ohio, which he distributed among the settlers. While in New York he had been engaged in the manufacture of potash and pearlash and had learned the cooper's trade, both of which he carried on in Ohio. In 1840 he built a saw-mill on Black Creek. He was probably living at Ashford, Conn., at the time of the 1790 Census, 2 males over 18, 3 males under 18, 5 females in the family. In the 1800 Census he is recorded with 1 male and 1 female over 45, 1 male and 2 females between 16 and 26, and 1 male between 10 and 16. He removed to Shokan, Ulster County, N. Y., in 1802.

The story is told in the family that Jonathan Abbey was in the company of patriots with General Israel Putnam when, on February 26, 1779, General Putnam escaped from 1500 English and Tories by running his horse down a hundred steps in the rock at Horseneck Hill, Greenwich, Conn. Jonathan said that Putnam told his men to look out for themselves, to retreat as best they could, and that he, being mounted, would take care of himself. The British broke in upon the company, who ran into a swamp, and Putnam started off, closely pursued by dragoons. Presently pistol shots were heard, Putnam dashed down the rocky steps, and the company never expected to behold him alive again, but soon they were delighted to see him come cantering back as if nothing had happened, and with no wound greater than a bullet-hole through his three-cornered hat.

Both Jonathan Abbey and his wife were buried in a cemetery at the site of the Ashokan Dam, and their remains were in 1910 removed to the Montrepose Cemetery in Kingston, by their descendants, Charles Augustus Abbey and Henry Abbey. The inscriptions read as follows:

He appears to have left Enfield after about 1783 as no further records of his family appear there. One account says he moved from the Ferry "out west." He is probably the Obadiah Abbe who was recorded in the 1790 Census in East Windsor, Conn., 1 male over 16, 2 males under 16, 4 females in his family.

Married JANE MC CLESTER. Stiles' Ancient Windsor wrongly records that Charles Abbe married Jane Maclester, only child of an Irish merchant, and had daughters, Jane, born January 6, 1780, and Sally, born October 1, 1792. Mr. James Allen Kibbe proves this error by an examination of the records in Enfield and Hartford. He finds that James McClester left an estate settled between October 20, 1778, and June 13, 1786, mentioning a widow, Elizabeth, and children, James, John, Jane, wife of Obadiah Abbe, and Eleanor, wife of Elihu Geer. In 1810 he was recorded at Oxford, N. Y., with a family of nine, 1 male over 45, 1 female between 26 and 45, 2 males and 1 female between 16 and 26, 1 male and 1 female between 10 and 16, and 2 males under 10. 410 Hiram Peter Abbey, b. 1822; m. Betsey A. Gregg.

195. AARON⁶ ABBEY, perhaps son of Aaron⁵ and Anna () Abbe. It is probable that the following records all refer to the same Aaron Abbey, whose ancestry is not known. The name is found on the records of Onondaga County, N. Y., in 1834, as buying property in Manlius; 1839, Aaron A. and Mary Abbey; 1847 and 1848, Aaron and Elizabeth, land in Elbridge. In Oneida County is recorded a deed made by Aaron and Jacob Abbey, 186½, land in Florence. Possibly the Susannah Abbey who in 1837 bought land in Florence is of the same family.

Andrews and Prudence Abbey sold land in 1842 and 1846. The will, probably of a younger Andrus, made March 27, 1868, probated March 24, 1869, calls him of Cincinnati, N. Y., and mentions his wife Harriet, and children, Harriet, Judson Adelbert (aged nine years on Oct. 14, 1867), and Elizabeth Maria, who became of age April 10, 1884. There was perhaps a child Olive also, who m. Edward Gillett. One Andrew Abbey, a blacksmith in Fabius, N. Y., was recorded in the Census of 1850, aged about 32, m. Jacob and Samuel Abbey sold land in 1811, but this is more likely an earlier Jacob. Jacob and Aaron Abbey sold land in Florence, Oneida County, in 1864.

Lieutenant Thomas Waterman was one of the original proprietors of Norwich, Conn. Elijah Waterman was graduated from Yale College in 1791, and taught in Hartford for a year. He had intended to study law but decided to take up theology instead. He was licensed to preach in Preston, Conn., May, 1793, and continued his studies, preaching as supply, until 1794, when he took charge of the church at Windham. He continued its pastor for ten years, and, after a short period of supply at New Milford, he was called to the church at Bridgeport, where he remained until the close of his life. He was known as an earnest, independent, public-spirited man, highly esteemed as a preacher. Several of his sermons and orations were published. He collected materials for a history of Windham which unfortunately became scattered and were never used. While he was pastor at Windham he made a trip to the western part of New York State in order to secure copies of early Windham Church records and he made a copy of those records as far as he could obtain them at the time.

In 1832 he moved to Bangor and after eight years, having retired from business, he broke up house-keeping and went to live with his daughter at Rockland, then East Thomaston. He was a successful merchant, though not well known outside of his immediate circle of friends, owing to his retiring disposition which led him to refuse offers of public office.

He resided for many years in New York City, where he was a member of the firm of Hill, Fish and Abbe, a transportation company between New York and Philadelphia. Mr. Hill of the firm attended to its interests in Philadelphia, Mr. Fish at Trenton, and Mr. Abbe at New York. Boats were used between New York and Perth Amboy and these were in charge of Captain Jacob Vanderbilt and his brother Cornelius, afterwards known as Commodore. From Amboy passengers were taken to Philadelphia in coaches. The transportation company was merged into the Camden and Amboy Railroad when that was built. It was the first passenger railroad in the United States. Mr. Samuel Badger Abbe, then a mere child, was taken on the excursion train that he might ride on the first passenger car in America. Mr. Abbe moved to Windham in 1835. He had a large fortune, as fortunes went in those days, when he left New York, but much of it disappeared before his death in various enterprises with which he was connected.

Married CHARLOTTE HACKSTAFF, born November 19, 1798, at Sing Sing, N. Y., daughter of Lodowick and Anne (Halleck) Hackstaff; died January, 1865.

Children

Samuel Badger Abbe, b. in New York City, Nov. 25, 1829; d. at Fort Snelling, Minn., Oct. 4, 1864. Married at Scotland, Conn., Aug. 25, 1858, Abby Fuller, b. at Scotland, March 15, 1833. She resides in St. Paul, Minn. The following account of Mr. Abbe's life is taken from a letter of Mrs. Abbe:

"Of the early life of my husband I know little, only he was placed at school when he was six years of age, somewhere up the Hudson, and later attended school at Pomfret, Conn., perhaps elsewhere. From a few old letters to his brother, I find that he sailed from New York to California, Nov. 17, 1849, in company with a young man of his own age, barely twenty. The boat had been fitted for them with the intention of its being placed on the Sacramento River when they arrived. Evidently it was unfit for ocean travel as it was so small it could only carry fuel from port to port. After going through the Straits of Magellan with great difficulty and danger, they landed at Panama, July 7, 1850, eight months from New York, and one month later reached San Francisco. The boat fulfilled its intention and was placed on the Sacramento River and was a financial success.

"Mr. Abbe remained in California until early in 1852. His father's death had occurred a short time before, and, urged by his mother, he went home to look after his father's estate. He crossed the Isthmus on his return, a rough trip at that time. He remained in Windham until the spring of 1853 when he went to St. Paul, met with a severe accident that detained him there some months, abandoned the idea of returning to California, decided to remain in the then young territory of Minnesota, and, like all the young men there, lent himself to the work of building up a new state. He was a member of the Legislature, a delegate to Railroad and State Conventions, laid out town sites and many other matters pertaining to the youth of a new country. A year or two later, a sale was made of the large military reservation at Fort Ripley on the upper Mississippi, in which he became interested, and, in 1860, built a house there, preparatory to starting a ranch, but before his plans were completed, the Civil War broke out. The regular troops were ordered away, in consequence came the Indian outbreak which swept the entire state. They burned the Missions, drove off the settlers and moved down to the Agency. The Government Agent, crazed with fright, committed suicide and the country was left to frontiersmen. We went into the Post, Fort Ripley, which was garrisoned with only a few raw recruits. After days and weeks of suspense, the Commissioner of Indian affairs, with Mr. Nicolay, Private Secretary to President Lincoln, and a few troops, came to our relief. Even then, after long delay, the Chiefs met them in council, they were all surrounded, and barely escaped with their lives, as Mr. Nicolay wrote afterwards in an article in Harper's Monthly.

"Mr. Abbe never recovered from the labor and suspense involved. We never returned to our home but went to St. Paul. Mr. Abbe went to Washington, made a hasty visit to Windham and went with the Commissioner of Indian Affairs and other officials to the Red River, where the Indians were turbulent, to make a treaty. He took a severe cold from which he never recovered. He was given officer's quarters at Fort Snelling where he lived for some months, and in that gray old fort, that had seen so many tragedies, his adventurous and promising life ended."

261. JESSE⁶ ABBEY, son of Joshua⁵, jr., and Tryphena (Bass) Abbe, born in Windham, Conn., February 14, 1783; died about 1859, in Van Buren County, Mich. He removed to Ohio and later to Michigan, where he kept a hotel and was a well-known character for many years. He was one of the pioneers in Antwerp and his log hostelry was well known throughout the country. The frugal fare of the day and a bottle of whiskey were the chief elements in the entertainment of the stage-coach passengers or the foot-travelers who stopped at these wayside inns. One day a traveler put up with the hospitable old landlord, and, as he went in, told him he had no money, but would pay him some day. The old gentleman replied: "Stay? Of course you can stay, and pay me when you can. I've had lots of customers, but never turned one away." Some time later, the traveler called, and, as he offered the money due Mr. Abbey on the old score, said, "Do you remember me? I stopped here and could not pay." "I don't remember," said Mr. Abbey, "but lots of folks have done that thing here. Maybe you did. You can pay what you please." On receiving the money, the old innkeeper exclaimed: "Hurrah for an honest man. Such a thing has never happened to me since I've kept tavern. I've trusted hundreds of people for their fare, and that has been the end of the matter. If there was a newspaper published anywhere in these parts, I'd put this in sure."

There was a settlement of "Buckeyes" or Wesleyan Methodists in Antwerp district. Jesse Abbey had joined this sect, and was considered a kind of patriarchal chief among them. His hair was gray, long, and thin. He wore a straw hat winter and summer, and usually, in meeting, seated himself by the side of the minister, his straw hat on his head; and if anything in the sermon pleased him, he would exclaim: "Good, that's right; ha, ha," clapping his hands in exultant emotion. Other leaders in the church were Father Libby and Johnny Johnson. There was a strife between them and Father Abbey as to who could talk or exhort the best in meeting.

Johnny Johnson could not write, and used to get his friends to write letters for him. On one occasion, after the letter was written, directed, and sealed, Johnson started home but returned in a short time, saying there was something he forgot to put in the letter. The writer protested against opening it as it was folded into envelope shape and sealed, but Johnson said it was very important and must be added to the letter. So the seal was broken and this sentence added: "Tell them that it is nick-el-ty tuckey with Father Abbey and me as to who can talk the best in meetin'." This important message was added to the letter, it was refolded, and sent to the friends in Ohio.

The 1850 Census records him as a farmer of Antwerp. In 1845 he sent to school an "adopted son," Ben Wait.

One account says he was born in Orange County, N. Y., and went, when a young man, to Orleans County, N. Y., where he married and later removed to Ohio. He lived near Elyria, Ohio, until about 1836 when the territory of Iowa was opened for settlers and he removed thither by wagon with his family, crossing the Mississippi on the ice in February. He finally settled upon land in Mount Vernon, Linn County, Iowa, then a wild prairie with no white inhabitants. There were several hundred Winnebago Indians living in that vicinity. Mr. Abbe was always friendly with them. In the season of maple sugar making there would often be as many as five hundred Indians camped around his door-yard. Mr. Abbe had a fine lot of maples and allowed the Indians to tap the trees, reserving what he needed for his own use. This reservation was never encroached upon.

Mr. Abbe was elected Justice of the Peace in the new settlement; acted as sheriff and his house was used to hold criminals until the first county jail was built. He was elected to the Legislature and served two terms. In 1849 he went with a party to the California gold fields. He returned in 1851, by way of Cape Horn; was shipwrecked and lost nearly all he had; but the following year found him again on his way to the gold fields, going by way of Panama and taking his oldest son, Andrew. They went to San Benito, Calif., and engaged in ranching and cattle-raising. He died while on a business trip to Sacramento. He was a member of the Masonic order and had much to do with the early history of Linn County.

There are extant several of her letters to her children, now in the possession of Mrs. Dora Walker, Mrs. Josiah Still and Mr. Edwin W. Burch. They are wonderful letters in point of the extreme poverty that seems to have been her lot, and yet the fortitude and Christian hope in which she lived are no less wonderful. Some of her older children had gone out to Chautauqua County, a son had established himself there and some of his sisters had gone out there to work in the families of former neighbors who had moved to near Westfield.

Newman Abbey Brown, b. 1824; d. in California about 1900; m. Eliza A. Whitman. Children: Three who d. young and a fourth, b. and d. on the voyage from New York to California, around Cape Horn.

He possessed unusual ability as a salesman and was the owner of two very successful stores, one in Madison and one in Boscobel, Wis. Trips to buy goods in these early days required a long time, and once when in New York City, where he had gone to purchase goods, he chanced to consult a fortune teller, who used cards. After shuffling the cards she told him there had been or was to be a death in his family. Shuffling them a second time she told him the same thing. After shuffling the third time, she said nothing but the expression on her face frightened him, and he entered upon the journey back to Wisconsin as soon as possible. Upon his arrival he learned that one of his children had died on a certain Wednesday and was buried the following Friday; a second child had died on the following Wednesday and had been buried the Friday following; the third child had died shortly before his arrival and was ready for burial.

This experience shortly thereafter affected his mind so that his business could not be properly carried on and he lost both stores. After a time, with the approval of his faithful wife, he decided to go to California and take up life anew. They sailed from New York Harbor around Cape Horn. There was born to them on the journey another child, but it died almost at birth and was buried at sea. Arriving in California, the change, for a time, seemed to be beneficial to him. With his limited capital he would buy the entire outfit of city trucksters, and, with his native ability to sell things, would retail it always at a profit. But as time went on, he consulted mediums and various kinds of fortune tellers who relieved him of much of his scanty means. After quite a long time he became unable to provide for his wife and she was obliged to return to her own family in the east. His latest years were passed with his mind entirely unbalanced.

327. JOHN⁶ ABBEY, son of Jonathan⁵ Abbey and Mrs. Lucy (Knox) Robins, born November 18, 1789, in Ashford, Conn.; died October 5, 1841, at the home of his son, Stephen, in Rondout, N. Y. He was living near Roekdale on the Unadilla River about 1822. He had a first-rate team that was admired by everyone who saw it. Knowing about this team, the two Assemblymen of the vicinity engaged Mr. Abbey to take them from Unadilla to Albany, a distance of a hundred miles. On the day appointed Mr. Abbey met them at the village inn. When the hostler brought the team around to the door, and the party came out to start on their journey, the Assemblymen complained to Mr. Abbey about the general appearance of the turn-out. They said that the horses were fine, but the sleigh was a miserable, old-fashioned affair, and the harness was worse. "Well, gentlemen," said Mr. Abbey, "I am much mistaken if you are more ashamed of me along the road than I shall be of you when you get to Albany."

Dominie Mason of Rondout liked a fine horse, and, knowing that John Abbey did too, drove up where he was standing one day, and said, "There, Mr. Abbey, what do you think of my horse?" "I think," said Mr. Abbey, "that he is in strong contrast with the one your Master rode into Jerusalem on."

354. DORREPHUS⁶ ABBEY, son of Peter⁵ and Hannah (Alden) Abbey, born July 13, 1792, in Suffield, Conn.; was hanged at Prescott, Canada, December 10, 1838, for his activities in the Patriots' War. He was a printer by trade, lived in Albany, N. Y., and later in Watertown and Oswego, at the time of his death was a resident of Pamelia, Jefferson County. In 1815 a monthly newspaper called "The Friend" was published by Dorrephus Abbey and his brother, Seth Alden Abbey, in Albany. Dorrephus Abbey was an early publisher of the Binghamton Republican Herald before 1822. In 1817 he was one of the founders of the Jefferson and Lewis Gazette at Watertown and in 1819 was instrumental in founding the Oswego Palladium at Oswego. He took an active part in the scheme in 1837 for freeing Canada from the English Government, known as the Patriots' War. Jefferson County was the scene of intense excitement at the time and "Hunter Lodges" were formed in every village to promote the Patriot cause. The real promoters of the scheme were too cowardly to take an active part in the expeditions and the punishment fell upon those who were conscientious in assisting what they believed to be a worthy cause.

There were some serious engagements between the troops or militia and the insurgents, and of these the most severe took place at Prescott, where the rebels had taken refuge in a stone wind-mill, from which they were ultimately driven by fire being set to the combustible matter in the lower part of the building. Many Americans who sympathized with the insurgents took part in the battle. An eye-witness stated that he counted 110 dead bodies on the snow, on the morning after the battle. Four of the officers of the expedition were captured, court-martialed and sentenced to be hung. Colonel Abbey is said to have met his death with great fortitude and the papers of the day reveal nothing but respect for his character and regret that his life should have been a sacrifice to an unfortunate cause.

The following letters written to his son and daughters on the eve of his execution have fortunately been preserved:

Fort Henry November 28, 1838.

My dear son :

I this moment received your letter by the hands of the sheriff. I am in want of nothing but what my friends at Watertown have already provided. Tell your dear sisters that one or both of them had better go to Oswego. As for yourself, take good counsel. . . .

Whatever may be my fate, you must exercise firmness and resignation commensurate to the trial; we must sooner or later part; it is of no great moment when and in what manner I take my exit. If my life is sacrificed, I have the approbation of an approving conscience, having been governed by integrity of purpose. Great delusion has, however, been entertained in relation to public opinion in Canada. They are not prepared for republican institutions. All governments should conform to the genius of the people.

Your affectionate father,

Dorrephus Abbey.

Mr. Abbey to his son:

Fort Henry, Tuesday night, Dec. 11, 1838.

Arm yourself my dear boy with fortitude, to hear the sad intelligence, that ere these lines meet your eye, I am numbered with the dead. My zeal in the cause of universal freedom has eventually cost me my life. But let it be remembered, that the unfortunate expedition I was engaged in, took a direction contrary to my views; but in this affair you can take no interest at present, or at any other time further than my reputation is concerned; time will develop facts, when my conduct and intentions will be known and appreciated.

When our condition became hopeless, I could then have taken opportunity to have made my escape across the line, but I could not bear the thoughts of deserting those brave, and many of them, worthy and amiable young men to destruction; life, thus preserved, would not be worth possessing.

In relation to my pecuniary affairs, you must be frequently with and advise with my friends' counsel, and also with Mr. Wiley, and if it should be necessary to sell any of my real estate, let the village property be sold if possible.

As regards yourself, cultivate your mind, associate with honorable men, aim high and let all your motives be of an exalted character; and now, my beloved son, I bid you adieu for ever.

Dorrephus Abbey.

To his daughters:

December 11, 1838.

My dear Daughters:

Many severe trials have awaited you from your earliest childhood, but that which you have now to endure, will require all your firmness; you are now left without a parent. Tomorrow morning closes my earthly scenes. You have to bear up under the most tremendous ordeal that the mind of female sensibility ever endured. But I have the consolation to believe, that your fortitude is equal to every contingency and event of human life; without the exercise of such sentiments, existence would scarcely be a blessing. I leave you now orphans under the protection, I trust, of my relations and personal friends. I particularly commend you to a great friend of your mother, Mrs. Woodruff. Mr. Wiley will no doubt take much interest in your welfare. I write from a gloomy cell, lying upon a bed of straw; the guard will soon call for the light, and I must close. Since my sentence, I could not procure materials for writing, till this late hour of my existence, which have just been furnished me by an officer of the garrison, by direction of the sheriff. Present me kindly to kindred and friends. I cannot discriminate; so farewell, my dear children.

Your affectionate father,

Dorrephus Abbey.

To Amelia Augusta and Arabella Abbey.

I slept soundly and quietly last night; I now feel as though I could meet the event with composure. The guard has not yet called.

Westminster Simeon Abbey, jr., resides in Brooklyn, conducts an extensive business in New York as dealer in military supplies, second-hand fire-arms, and various wares.

Jonathan C. Abbey, was a grocer in New York City.

Emily Abbey.

Westminster⁷ Abbey and his father before him have kept shop on Front Street since the oldest mariner who guides his ship into New York harbor can remember.

For over eighty years, says the New York Mail, the "Westminster Abbey" sign has blistered in sunshine and flapped in storm. On all sides of the shop sit, lean and tumble, the most remarkable assortment of wares ever assembled on land or sea.

There is everything from a paper of needles to a sheet anchor. Overall, bisque ornaments, andirons, neckties, silver pitchers, writing paper, army blankets, Roman swords, pearl brooches, paintings, camping outfits, opera glasses, bottles with ships in them, teething rings, prayer books, oilskins, jewelry, cannon balls, muskets and cold cream.

"I'm looking for Mr. Abbey."

"I'm Westminster," said a man with a grizzled gray mustache, merry brown eyes and a crippled foot, looking up from a cluttered desk. "Come right in and look around."

"But I came to ask about that offer of Coney Island for $500."

Westminster chuckled. "Ho, ho! Well, it was a fact all right. Fifty-nine years ago," he went on, making some subtractions on the back of an envelope, "my dad was asked to buy the whole of Coney for $500. The very spot where the frankfurters are sizzling and the whirligigs are spinning and the bathhouse sharks are holding folks up and the sandgrabbers are charging real money for a look at the ocean!

"Father couldn't see any use buying a wind-swept, snipe-breeding sandy waste like that! Nobody went down there except to shoot birds once in a while. New York had less than 500,000 people in it.

"There wasn't any immigration to speak of. Nobody dreamed the town would grow to millions of population. And nobody wanted Coney THEN!"

The purchase of Coney was not the only wealth-weighted suggestion that was given gratis to the Westminster Abbey family.

The grandfather of the present Westminster lived with his good wife up in Putnam County. Wife was an excellent woman, but fussy about her housekeeping. When a certain poor fur trader used to drop into the Abbey farmhouse, Gran'ma would call out: "Is that that man Astor again? If he stays here, he'll have to take his meals in the outhouse and sleep in the barn." And John Jacob Astor, trapper and trader, had to abide by Ma Abbey's decision.

He took it in good part, however, quite understandingly, and often told Grandfather Abbey that if he'd sell out his holdings in upstate land and buy lots in the little growing town of New York, he'd be glad of it some day.

He was the son of William Poppleton, who was born in 1795 in Poultney, Vt., and Zada Crooks, who was born in 1796 in Blandford, Mass. The Poppletons have an illustrious English ancestry going back to a General in the time of Queen

Mary and including, on this side, Revolutionary ancestors. Zada Crooks' ancestry goes back to the famous Knox family that produced John Knox, the reformer, and General Henry Knox of Revolutionary fame.

Orrin Poppleton removed with his family to Michigan about 1825, settling in Troy. He spent a year at the Granville, Ohio, Seminary, then engaged as clerk in Pontiac for two years, teaching a district school in Troy for some winters. In August, 1840, he began his mercantile business in Birmingham, which he conducted for over 50 years. For many years he was active in politics, serving as Representative to the state Legislature in 1853. He was solicited to stand as candidate for Congress and as Governor, both of which he declined. For eight years he was postmaster at Birmingham, 1853-61, and for sixteen years a member of the Congressional Committee for his district, its chairman for twelve years. He was president of the Oakland County Pioneer and Historical Society for eleven years, vice-president of the State Society seven years, and its president one year, also a member of the American Historical Association.

He was especially prominent in a number of charitable organizations. For forty years he was an officer in the New York Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor. He was one of the managers of the Hospital for the Relief of the Ruptured and Crippled, and was one of the governors of the New York Hospital. He took an active interest in educational matters and at the time of his death was an Inspector of Public Schools for the Eighteenth Ward.

Mr. Abbe was a prominent worker among the Baptists, was a deacon at the Madison Avenue Baptist Church, vice-president of Madison University (Baptist), and one of the founders of the American Bible Union. His whole life was spent in active work among the poor in the hospitals and in the church. He was a strong abolitionist, and when the war broke out, not only opposed secession, but subscribed liberally for the outfit of our soldiers.

Married in New York City, January 19, 1837, CHARLOTTE COLGATE, born in New York City, March 23, 1817; died in New York City, February 19, 1885; buried with her husband, in Greenwood Cemetery, Brooklyn. She was the daughter of Bowles and Lourina (Townsend) Colgate. Bowles Colgate was born in Shoreham, Kent, England, son of Robert and Sarah (Bowles) Colgate (who were married in Kent about 1740), and with his brother, William, founded the firm of the Colgate Soap Company in 1806. Robert and Sarah (Bowles) Colgate were leaders among the Baptists and dissenters, and were from families that had been with the Pilgrims at Leyden in 1610-20. Robert died about 1805 and his wife about 1845. Both were noted for strong characteristics that marked the children, notably the eldest daughter, Maria, and the eldest son, William. Among their grandchildren, perhaps the oldest son of William, James Bronson Colgate, and Charlotte, daughter of Bowles, preserved most perfectly the family peculiarities and traits that had persisted unchanged for three or four centuries; nor were these changed to any important extent during the succeeding generations. Charlotte Colgate was one of the early pupils of Mrs. Greene's school in New York City, a school that recently celebrated its centennial of prosperity and wide influence. Lourina Townsend was the daughter of Gilbert and Abigail (Mead) Townsend and the granddaughter of John and Jemima (Travis) Townsend of Dutchess County, N. Y.

He had a common school education and entered the first year of High School. At the age of twenty-two, he enlisted, September 27, 1862, in Company B, 128th Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and served most of his time for three years in the bakery at Johnson's Island. During the time he made two trips down the Mississippi with prisoners. He was honorably discharged June 9, 1865. At the close of the war, Horace Abbe, with his brothers, Norman, George, and John, invested their earnings in three sections of Michigan timber, and at the same time took charge of their father's farm of 300 acres east of Elyria. After about two years they dissolved partnership and Horace and Norman located on the old homestead. In 1873 they bought the adjoining farm which was the original location of Thomas Aston, Mrs. Horace Abbe's father. These farms were managed by them until the death of Norman, when the property was sold and Horace moved to Elyria. In 1879 Mr. Abbe made a trip to England to import Hereford cattle and Cotswold sheep and they were known over the United States for many years as breeders of these varieties. The two brothers were so closely associated in business and other ways that the death of Norman was a serious loss to Horace and his health failed rapidly, with accompanying depression of spirits. He ended his life during a period of depression. He and his family are members of the Episcopal Church.

Married February 16, 1870, MARY ANN ELIZABETH ASTON, born January 13, 1847, daughter of Thomas Aston. He was a descendant of Ensign Hugh Mosher, who settled in Salem about 1636; was a friend of Roger Williams and followed him to Rhode Island, settling in Westerly. Ephraim Mosher was one of the foremen of a pioneer construction gang on the Erie Canal between St. Johnsville and Buffalo, and later steered the first canal boat between Lockport and Brockport. It was upon his suggestion that Governor Clinton decided upon the plan of having a row of cannon placed within "hearing distance" apart across the state, between New York and Buffalo, to flash the news of the completion of the great enterprise. Mosher accompanied Governor Clinton's historic boat, departing from Buffalo at 10 A. M., the morning of October 26, 1825, leaving the boat at Little Falls, whence he returned the same day with a cargo of household goods, the first boat-load of merchandise to reach Buffalo from the eastern part of the state over the canal. The story goes that this first boat-load of household goods went to Chautauqua County, where Mosher settled near Worksburg.

Upon the death of the father of the late Leonard Case, founder of the Case School of Applied Science in Cleveland, Mr. Case found it necessary to call to his assistance Mr. Abbey as his general manager and confidential agent. The Case estate was of such a varied character that it demanded negotiations with all kinds of men and corporations and it required a very high order of administrative ability in its confidential agent. The publication of the Western Reserve and Northern Ohio Historical Society speaks in words of praise for Mr. Abbey's association with the work:

Mr. Abbey relieved Mr. Case of all business cares and was most eminently qualified for the duties which he had been called to undertake. He had lived in Cleveland from his infancy and united great strength of mind to a thorough study of the law, long experience in business, knowledge of the world and cultivated taste in literature.

He had been a practicing lawyer in Milwaukee, clerk of Wisconsin House of Representatives, a pioneer for gold in 1849 in California; he had "rocked the cradle" on the sands of the Sacramento and Klamath Rivers, and had brought back to Cleveland the net results—some gold dust and a full stock of experience. He had settled down to sober hard work in his profession, had been much trusted as a master commissioner, referee and administrator of estates, and was a thoroughly equipped and able coadjutor of all the projects and purposes of Mr. Case in relation to the property, and all other matters requiring counsel, labor and management."

Henry Gilbert Abbey married in Trinity Church, Cleveland, September 28, 1859, AMELIA MATHILDE JOHNSTONE, born in Cleveland, January 22, 1838; died at Setauket, N. Y., September 20, 1912. 611. EDWIN ALDEN⁷ ABBEY, son of Seth Alden⁶ and Merey (Hunt) Abbey, born in Watertown, N. Y., December 9, 1823; died at Corvallis, Ore., January 15, 1893; buried in Newton Cemetery. In 1832 with his parents he removed to Cleveland, Ohio, where he resided until 1844, when he went south and was employed on the Mississippi River. In the month of September, 1846, he sailed from New Orleans to Mexico, being attached to the quartermaster's department in the divisions of Generals Wool and Taylor. Having served until near the close of the war, he accompanied Collins to Chihuahua, with despatches to General Price to evacuate that portion of the country, which duty being performed, he rejoined the army on the line of march to Santa Fe, and was destined to accompany Company I, First Dragoons, as wagon master. He was thus engaged with that corps until 1851. Mr. Abbey then went overland, traveling as far as Fort Laramie with the famous Kit Carson, and arrived in Benton County, Oregon, in the fall of that year. He located his claim about four miles from what was then Marysville, now Corvallis, and at once set to farming. In 1856, with two companions, Mr. Abbey made the pioneer journey to Yaquima Bay, on his part a trip of simple pleasure and adventure. There were no roads, and Phil Sheridan, then a Lieutenant, was having his men cut a trail over the mountains to lead from the reservation to civilization. Mr. Abbey, following the trails, made Yaquima Bay about two miles from its mouth. At that time there was not a single resident in that part of the country. In 1862 he took up his residence in Corvallis, remaining there for three years. He then took up a large tract of land in Yaquima, near Elk City, about twenty-two miles from Newport, which he still owned at the time of his death.

One of his nephews writes, "Uncle Edwin never returned to the east until 1889. He was a most delightful character and I recall vividly his account of a night ride with despatches in the Mexican War in the moonlight, many times shot at but never hit. He met his wife in the journey across the plains."

Married in New York City, April 22, 1890, MARY GERTRUDE MEAD, born in Torquay, Devonshire, England, March 15, 1851, daughter of Frederick and Mary E. (Scribner) Mead. She was graduated from Vassar College in 1870, studied in Berlin, 1881-2, and in Paris, 1883-4. They had no children.

The following is for the most part made up from a most appreciative article in the Craftsman of October, 1911, by Louis A. Holman:

Born in Philadelphia eight years before the Civil War broke out, Abbey was in school at the time when men's thoughts were chiefly on the great struggle. His two years' art training were over before the paralyzing effect of war had passed. He was in a very real sense a self-made man, as severe a critic of his own work and as exacting as any master could have been. He, however, always gave the credit for his success to his merchant grandfather, a man of fine artistic feeling, who like Abbey's own father spent many a day at his easel. A friend who called on Abbey while he was at work on the coronation picture has recently recalled some of the conversation.

"Abbey," said the caller, "it is a great work and a great chance; but tell me, how did you get it?"

"Through my grandfather," said Abbey.

"I see by the papers that you are also to decorate the new Capitol of Pennsylvania. Did your grandfather get that commission for you too?"

And Abbey gravely replied: "If I do the work he will be the cause."

There is a photograph of Abbey taken when he was eight years old. With dreamy unconsciousness he had posed himself at a table, not with a toy but with paper and pencil. When he was but fourteen, it is said, "Oliver Optic's Magazine for Boys and Girls" published a rebus of his designing. He began drawing on wood for a wood engraver when he was sixteen. A sketch called "The First Thanksgiving" submitted to Harper's Magazine was accepted. This triumph eventually resulted in 1871 in his joining the staff of that magazine. In the July Harper's of 1871 there is a poem accompanied by a number of illustrations done by several of the staff. Among them is one signed by Abbey. In 1873 he was Harper's humorous artist, and illustrated the "Editor's Drawer."

In 1878 he went to England to make the Herrick illustrations, and, except for short visits, he never returned to America. Englishmen soon forgot that this genial, brilliant man was a foreigner, possibly because he was supremely happy in the land of his adoption. He was everywhere held in high favor, and honors showered upon him. He became one of a notable group of American artists who found in England a sympathetic artistic environment. Abbey materially aided in increasing the esteem in which his fellow countrymen were held. There is a story that once he tried to break away from the witchery of the picturesque country of England, but after his household goods had reached America he weakened and the unpacking was not done until they got back to England.

At Broadway in Worcestershire, Abbey found friends and there he lingered, gathering material for his drawings. A friend of his said that in the wonderful garden of Russell House, the home of Frank Millet, he had often seen, on the same morning, each painting from his own model, Abbey, Sargent, Miller, Alma-Tadema and Alfred Parsons. It was at hospitable Russell House that Abbey first met Miss Mary Gertrude Mead of New York, who later became his wife. Here, too, he had the good fortune to meet Alfred Parsons, and Alfred Parsons had the still better fortune to meet Abbey. Then and there began that wonderful collaboration, the result of which for many a year charmed the artistic world.

Successful, from every point of view, as were the illustrations for Herrick, and Goldsmith, and Shakespeare, he yet longed to be a beginner in other fields of art, not that he might make a fortune or win applause, but that he might have the joy of wandering in a new region. He bought an ancient house at Fairford, Gloucestershire, some fifty miles south of Broadway. Here he built a large studio and entered the lists as a painter of English romance and history.

In 1891 he began the famous "Holy Grail," a series for the Boston Public Library. Five years later his "Richard, Duke of Gloucester and the Lady Anne" won him his A.R.A. In two more years he became a full Academician. The work, however, which brought him his greatest recognition in England was his painting of the coronation of Edward the Seventh, "by command" of the king. In the State Capitol at Harrisburg, Pa., are eight murals, of such widely different character, being wholly symbolic subjects treated in a modern manner, that he was compelled to leave the well-worn road and blaze out a new one.

He had essayed work in one province after another: illustration; pen and wash drawings; paintings, water color, pastel and oil; mural decoration, historic and symbolic. He will hold his place as one of America's foremost colorists, as one of her rarest draftsmen, as the most poetic painter of mediaeval subjects in his time, and as the greatest illustrator that America has yet produced.

Close student and hard worker as Abbey proved himself, he found time for friends and for play. There probably never lived an American artist who had a greater host of friends. So often after his death were heard the words, "Abbey was a most lovable man." He was the soul of generosity, not only in material things, but in his sketches and drawings and in the preparation and care he exercised in connection with his mural decorations. He spent much more than his compensation on models and costumes and research work that the paintings might be worthy the place they were to occupy.

Artists say that when he criticised their work he always searched for something encouraging to say. He was instinctively refined, with a manner that would have won him his way into palaces even if he had started life as a hod-carrier. He never considered himself an expatriate, never lost his American accent or manner. He had a keen love for all clean, good sport, and had the devotion of an American boy for baseball. As he could not in England bring together enough men to play this game, he took up cricket as a substitute, had a ground prepared at his Gloucestershire house, and himself became president of the club.

Perhaps there was nothing about him that made such a universal appeal as his alert sense of humor. His nickname in the old New York days was "Chestnut," an appellation derived from a favorite story which he could relate in a most inimitable way. The Chestnut Story was one of those interminable, pointless, humbug narratives, eternally getting to the point and never arriving there; exciting vast interest and calculation in regard to the chestnuts on a certain tree; promising a rich and racy solution in the very next sentence; straying off into episodes that baffled the ear and disappointed the hope. The tale could be prolonged by him when he was at his best for a good part of an hour, without ever releasing the attention or satisfying the expectation. English literary men began to use the title in their writing as a type of an endless or unsatisfactory yarn, and the word Chestnut, crossing the sea, returned again to the land of its birth and became the accepted definition of what is tedious, old and interminable.

WELLINGTON ABBEY, son of Nathaniel and Mary (Nugent) Abbey, born in Port Hope, Ontario, Canada, April 22, 1840; died in Fond du Lac, Wis., September 23, 1901. As his father died when he was but a child, he was early thrown upon his own resources and from the time he was fifteen he was dependent on his own efforts. While his early education was limited, he became a well-informed man due to his retentive memory and his constant habits of study. In his home were always found the leading papers and periodicals and a well-equipped library. With the family, he came from Canada to Sheboygan, Wis., in 1849. In 1851, his mother with the other children returned to Canada and Wellington removed to Fond du Lac County, where he afterward resided with the exception of two years, 1859 to 1861, which he spent with his mother in Canada.

Returning to Wisconsin, he enlisted December 9, 1861, in Company A, 14th Wisconsin Infantry. After a winter in camp, the regiment was ordered to the front and participated in the last day of the battle of Shiloh. The day before the battle of Tupelo the 14th captured the flag of the 17th Mississippi Regiment, and participated in that battle, when a bullet passed through Mr. Abbey's hat. The regiment rendered effective service at the battle of Pittsburg, then proceeded to Corinth and on to the siege of Vicksburg. During the thickest of the fight, Mr. Abbey saw his cousin, Charles Abbey, lying wounded, a ball having passed through his right thigh. He raised him up in an effort to relieve him, and just at that moment a ball, undoubtedly aimed at Wellington, struck Charles and pierced him through the heart.

After the siege of Vicksburg, the regiment was in the battle of Holly Springs, then embarked down the Mississippi where they assisted in the capture of a quantity of cotton and in digging a canal. They then saw service at Vicksburg and Natchez, and, after a furlough of thirty days, nearly all reënlisted and proceeded on the Red River Expedition. During the rest of the war they were engaged in Arkansas and other states in the South and were in Montgomery when the news of Lincoln's assassination reached them. They were discharged at Mobile, Ala., October 9, 1865, and after burying his brother Isaac, who died that very day, Wellington returned to Fond du Lac, and purchased a farm in Byron, which, with additions, became one of the best farms in the township.

Mr. Abbey was a member of the G. A. R. and a strong advocate of prohibition principles. In the fall of 1910 he retired to Fond du Lac. He was buried in the cemetery near the little country church in Byron, where he had already erected a monument to his children who had died before.

Extract from Major General Robertson's Letter to His Excellency General Carleton vizt.:

New York 13th Feby. 1777.

Mr. Samuel Willis has had General Gage's commission some years as Barrack Master at Illinois and Abraham Abbey as Barrack Master at Detroit. They appeared as such in all the General Returns. The first has been employed as my Clerk, and the other an old faithful serjt. had leave to go to Ireland for some months; both of them hired proper Deputies. I find from a letter of Mr. Meyrick, that they are off the List from the time that General Gage went home, I suspect that this arises from their not appearing on the Returns after October 1775. Let me assure you that they are both of merit, & ruined if turned out of an office. Should this have arose from an undesigned Omission, let me beg you will have the goodness to order the error in the Returns to be explained, and set right in the next. If you meant they should be struck off because not present, suffer me to assure you that they are not at fault, & that their being replaced will be a favor I should receive with gratitude, they are men who have served well, and whom I should be mortified much, if not able by your favor to protect.

In Northamptonshire and Rutland Wills (British Record Society) are noted the following Abbey wills, all of the sixteenth century, probably: Elizabeth, Isabella, John, Richard, Robert, Thomas, all of Staverton; Thomas of Potterspury; Thomas of Roade. In the Calendar of Lincoln Wills (British Record Society) are these, sixteenth century: Jo. Abba, Gedney; Ann Abbey, Thoresway; Jo. Abbey, Thoresway; Margt. Abbey, Thoresway.

Bridges' History of Northamptonshire mentions: "Joh. Abbey, Pbr.," 1415, Church of St. Mary, Spelho Hundred; "Dom. Joh. Abbey, Cl.," 1416, at Twywell, and 1423, at Thingden.

William Abbe is mentioned in the Calendar of Patent Rolls, 1329.

Rev. John Abbey was for a long time secretary of the agricultural department of the Church of England Temperance Society, and published many pamphlets and articles on the subject of temperance. In a letter from him, dated, Oxford House, 69 Comerach Road, West Kensington, S. W., Sept. 2, 1887, he says: "I think there is no doubt that, in very early times, the family was associated with the religious houses and I should judge that we derived our name from them. Those engaged at or in the Abbey might easily be called the Abbies, or the people of, or from, the Abbey. There are not many of that name of Abbey in the country. I do not think there are a dozen in all London, and only four among the whole body of the clergy in the United Kingdom. I cannot trace the name back to the original stem. The name is most common in Yorkshire at a small town called Selby, about twelve or fifteen miles south of York. I was born within seven miles of York. A number of our friends went out to America many years ago. Those that I have known bearing our name have either been engaged in trade or agriculture."

A letter from the Rev. C. J. Abbey, Checkendon, near Reading, Berkshire, a distinguished scholar and author, dated Feb. 16, 1888, says: "I had a few notes relative to the Abbeys, but nothing about the family previous to 1750. I expect it had long been settled in Northamptonshire and other midland counties, chiefly as respectable farmers. The few notes I refer to were made some sixty years ago by an uncle who was then a Major in the army. I had another uncle at the siege of Bergen op Zoon, a young officer who was killed on a scaling ladder. Another of my uncles, also an Abbey, was a physician at the Russian Court.''

The Edinburgh City Directory of 1882 gave these names: David S. Abbey, session clerk, Bainfield Cottage, n. Fort St.; Miss Abbey, teacher, Madras School, Church Road, New Haven.

Among the rainfall observers in the West Riding of Yorkshire in 1875 was J. B. Abbey, Esq., who maintained three stations, Meltham (Harding Moss), Meltham (Grange), and Longwood (Bilberry Edge). In 1881 Mr. G. Abbey maintained a station at Grimkee Park, Lofthouse, North Riding, Yorkshire.

Matthew Abbey, with two other Englishmen, Mr. Close and Mr. Hoe, went to Russia, under the supervision of Daniel Wheeler, to cultivate some boggy land at a place called Shusharry. He and his wife are buried there but it is no settlement. Matthew Abbey had three sons, Joseph, George, William. Joseph and his family all died before 1912. George had no family. William Abbey died in 1882, leaving five sons, all living in Russia in 1912; Matthew, John, Alfred, Walter, and William. His wife Eleanor was living at Villa Strauch, Kuokala, Finland, in 1912, aged 88. William was a manufacturer of agricultural implements in 1866. The pastor of the British-American Church, St. Petersburg, Russia, in May, 1912, reported the following Abbey records on the books of that church: Matthew Abbey admitted to membership, May, 1835; Hannah Abbey, 1839; Mr. and Mrs. George Abbey, 1840; Joseph Abbey, 1851; William Abbey, 1872. Mrs. Eleanor Abbey was the oldest member of the church in 1912.

Ernst Abbe, a distinguished authority on practical optics, to whom astronomical science is in no small measure indebted, was born in Eisenach, Germany, Jan. 23, 1840, the son of an employee in a textile factory; died in 1905. He pursued the university courses at Jena, 1857-9, and at Göttingen, 1859-61. At the latter university he took his degree with a thesis on the mechanical theory of heat. In 1863 he began teaching at Jena. For several years he assisted Carl Zeiss, the mechanician at the Jena University, in his efforts to improve the microscope, and in 1875, became the silent partner in the firm of Zeiss & Company. He held the chair of theoretical physics and astronomy, and was director of the observatory until 1889, when, at his own request, he was relieved and delivered only occasional lectures. On the death of Carl Zeiss in 1886, he became the sole owner of the famous Zeiss optical works, and might have acquired a great fortune, but his interest in his fellow-men led him, in 1891, to cede his rights as owner to a coöperative society, known as the Carl Zeiss Stiftung, the story of which has been set forth most interestingly in a pamphlet by Professor Anerbach of Jena. It has been considered the most unique and the most successful combination of commercial and scientific endeavor that has ever been attempted. Ernst Abbe was married in 1871 to the daughter of one of the professors at the University of Jena, and had two daughters.

APPENDIX

CLEVELAND ABBE, 1838-1916

(From the Monthly Weather Review, for September, 1916.)

Professor Cleveland Abbe died about 4 A. M. on October 28, 1916. He had been in ill health since June 4, 1915, when he was stricken by a paralysis of the right side, from which he had largely recovered. Since July, 1916, however, he had suffered from a malignant degeneration of a mole, which rapidly became so extensive as to prevent his resting comfortably in other than one position. The resultant irritation and great loss of sleep, together with the restricted diet imposed by the conditions of his paralysis, drained his strength. He returned from Portland, Maine, where he had spent the summer of 1916, about the middle of September and in a greatly weakened condition. For a few days he enjoyed the freedom of his home, but soon retired to the room which he kept until the end. Mentally but little change was observable, and even on the afternoon of October 25 he dictated a letter to the Secretary of the Smithsonian concerning the details of publication of a paper on meteors.

Thus passes an enthusiastic promoter of international good will; a devoted son of Science who appreciated and rejoiced in all advances in any of her many fields; a meteorologist of broad and deep scholarship, whose enthusiasm was an inspiration and encouragement to all about him and whose zeal did not flag in the very hour of death; a patriot whose lifelong service to the welfare of his country fully deserved the unusual courtesy shown by the half-masted flags on the Department of Agriculture and the Weather Bureau on the day he was laid to rest.

SYMONS MEMORIAL MEDAL FOR 1912

The Symons Memorial Gold Medal, which is awarded biennially by the Royal Meteorological Society of England, was presented to Professor Cleveland Abbe at the annual general meeting on January 17, 1912. We reprint the official report of the proceedings as published in the Quarterly Journal of the Royal Meteorological Society, London, 1912, 38:156-7.

PRESENTATION OF THE SYMONS MEMORIAL GOLD MEDAL

The President [Dr. H. N. Dickson] said that it now fell to him to perform one of the most pleasant duties connected with his office, the presentation of the Symons Gold Medal. He would ask Prof. Cleveland Abbe to accept this medal, but the secretary would first read the extract from the minutes of the council concerning this award.

The Secretary read the following extract from the minutes of the council meeting of November 15, 1911:

"Prof. Cleveland Abbe was born on December 3rd, 1838, at New York. He began active scientific work as a mathematical lecturer, but early in the sixties he joined the U. S. Coast and Geodetic Survey. He was resident at Pulkowa, 1864-1866, which was then under the Directorship of the younger Struve. Abbe returned to the United States and became assistant at the U. S. Naval Observatory. In 1868 he was appointed Director of the observatory at Cincinnati, into which he infused new life. He joined the Weather Service of the United States in 1871 and it is in connection with that organization that his great life work has been performed.

"Apart from a large amount of official work, evidence of which may be found in the publications of the Weather Bureau, he is notable mainly for: (1) his collection of papers on the Mechanics of the Earth's Atmosphere, which are today indispensable in work on the dynamics of meteorology. Volume I was issued in 1891 and Volume II in 1908 [issued by the Smithsonian Institution in 1910]; (2) his treatise on Meteorological Apparatus and Methods issued in 1888. This is a historical and practical account to which even the meteorologist of the twentieth century may turn for instruction; (3) his Preparatory Studies for Deductive Methods in Storm and Weather Predictions, issued in 1890; (4) his articles on Meteorology in the Encyclopædia Britannica, which are no doubt well known to all Fellows of the Society.

"Prof. Abbe was one of the first to realize the importance of experimental investigations of atmospheric radiation, and it was largely due to his enterprise that the well known researches of Hutchins and Pearson were undertaken. The importance of this work has been recently emphasized by its application to the explanation of the isothermal conditions of the upper atmosphere. Prof. Abbe has contributed therefore to instrumental, statistical, dynamical, and thermodynamical meteorology, and forecasting. He has moreover, played throughout, the part, not only of an active contributor, but also of a leader who drew others into the battle and pointed out the paths along which attacks might be successful.

"He is a Fellow of the Royal Astronomical Society, a member of the National Academy [of Sciences of the United States], and an Honorary Fellow of our own Society."

The President then said:

"Professor Abbe, we have listened to the statement of the Secretary setting forth the reasons which have led the Council to award you the Symons Gold Medal on this occasion. I do not think it is necessary or desirable to add to what has already been stated by any further expansion of the points that have been set forth. Every member of the Society is sensible of his indebtedness to the work which you have done in the past in connection with our science. I may perhaps be permitted to add on behalf of those members of the Society who have had the privilege of becoming personally acquainted with you, our sense of the very great debt we owe to you for personal encouragement. I remember the occasion some five and twenty years ago, on which I came a raw and budding meteorologist to Washington, and had the privilege of enjoying the hospitality which you so generously offered to those working in the subject, and I remember the strong stimulus which I received from you at that time. There are very many other meteorologists who must be conscious of owing to you a similar debt. It gives me very great pleasure, Sir, to offer you, on behalf of the Society, this Gold Medal."

Professor Cleveland Abbe said that it gave him the greatest pleasure to have his name associated with that of their dear friend and colleague George James Symons. He could not express his emotion but could only thank them most sincerely for the honor they had conferred on him in awarding him the medal. This event will always be to him a stimulus to future labors. They were all brothers in science and he was greatly touched to hear the account read by the secretary that they had so closely watched his career and labors in a science of which they had not yet reached the end.

REPRINT FROM THE MONTHLY WEATHER REVIEW, APRIL, 1916

MARCELLUS HARTLEY MEMORIAL MEDAL, 1916

On April 18, 1916, the National Academy of Sciences, meeting at Washington, D. C., awarded a Marcellus Hartley medal "for eminence in the application of science to the public welfare" to Prof. Cleveland Abbe in recognition of his services in connection with the foundation and organization of the United States Weather Bureau. The nominating speech was made by Prof. William Morris Davis, and the acceptance was by Prof. Charles Frederick Marvin for Prof. Abbe, who was absent on account of ill health.

The award of the Hartley medal to Cleveland Abbe is the first time this medal has gone to one of the members of the National Academy of Sciences.

By the courtesy of the National Academy of Sciences it is possible to publish here the remarks made on the occasion, remarks of historic value as indicating the character of the medallist and also as recording some little-known details in the history of the Weather Bureau.—C. A., jr.

REMARKS BY WILLIAM MORRIS DAVIS

Among the gratifying duties of the National Academy of Sciences is that of awarding certain medals in recognition of notable achievement. One of our medals, founded by a daughter in memory of her father, Marcellus Hartley, of New York, is to be given for "eminence in the application of science to the public welfare." I am glad, Mr. President, that this medal is awarded for eminence in the application of science, for if it were to be awarded for prominence, it never could have been given to a man so modest, so retiring, so diffident, as Cleveland Abbe. We all have had a warm pleasure in voting to approve the discernment of our committee in nominating this gentle man, who has so long labored quietly, without ostentation, never intruding himself upon public notice for the display of his learning, to be the recipient of a medal for real eminence in the work that he has done for his country's good.

It is singular and regrettable that, although we have a large and varied assortment of weather, sometimes, indeed, an oversupply of it, spread across the continent from ocean to ocean, we have had but few weather men—meteorologists—of high standing. The devotees of the subject have too often perpetuated an unscientific, astrological habit of mind, elsewhere extinct. Only about six of them have attained academic rank. Redfield and Espy were contemporaries and competitors in the first half of the nineteenth century—Redfield, a careful observer and a cautious theorizer, a true inductive philosopher, to whom the world owes the first demonstration that West Indian hurricanes are gigantic whirlwinds; Espy, an equally good observer but a bolder theorizer, whose keen deductions regarding atmospheric convection and the associated adiabatic changes of temperature in air currents having a vertical component excited less admiration in our own then unlearned country than in more learned countries abroad. The work of these eminent Americans was done before the formation of the National Academy, but Redfield was a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences in Boston, and Espy of the American Philosophical Society in Philadelphia.

Long before their time lived the most famous of all American meteorologists, Benjamin Franklin, who not only established the identity of lightning and electricity about the middle of the eighteenth century, but proved at a somewhat earlier date that our north-east storms come from the southwest, and thus laid the basis of modern weather predictions. His name is still worthily celebrated every year by the famous academic society that he founded.

Redfield and Espy were followed in the second half of their century by Loomis and Ferrel, in whom the contrasts of the two earlier masters were repeated. They were both members of this Academy. Like Redfield, Loomis was faithfully inductive; it was he who first analyzed and generalized the great body of observations that were recorded on the early weather maps of the Signal Service. He thus established a large number of values regarding the behavior of winds, the changes of temperature, and the fall of rain or snow in the traveling areas of high and low pressure that sweep eastward through the Temperate Zone; and in this fundamental work he has not, I regret to say, as yet been followed by a worthy successor. Like Espy, Ferrel was inventively deductive; he directed his extraordinary native powers of mathematical analysis to such problems as the general circulation of the atmosphere and the vortical currents of cyclones and tornadoes, and made an enduring mark upon them. The autobiography of this self-taught farmer's boy is a touching story of emerging genius.

During an intermediate period Maury systematized the reduction of meteorological observations at sea; Joseph Henry did much to encourage systematic meteorological observation on land; and Coffin, utilizing all available records from lands and seas, compiled his great work on the Winds of the Globe; but the impress of these three men on the scientific interpretation of atmospheric phenomena was not so profound as that of Redfield and Espy before them or of Loomis and Ferrel after them.

Cleveland Abbe was for a time the academic contemporary of the last two named, as he is now almost their solitary meteorological successor in this country; for of others, we have lost Lawrence Rotch, founder and director of that admirable institution, the Blue Hill Meteorological Observatory, near Boston, by his untimely death four years ago.

It is the practical turn which Abbe gave to his scientific studies nearly 50 years ago that we celebrate to-night, for it was then, when he was a young man in Cincinnati in 1868, that he first put into execution in this country a scheme of daily weather prediction, based upon the telegraphic concentration of widespread synchronous observations. Would that he could be with us this evening to tell the story of that novel undertaking, but in his absence I may perhaps advert to certain matters which might embarrass him were he with us. His private enterprise was soon superseded by the establishment of a national meteorological bureau at the hands of Gen. A. J. Myer, Chief Signal Officer of the Army; and thereupon Abbe was brought to Washington as the one expert of the country qualified to set the new service on its scientific feet. Here for all these years since 1870, first in the War Department, later in the Department of Agriculture, he has been the senior scientific adviser of the Weather Service, and thus his influence in practical meteorology over the length and breadth of our land has been enormous. Although his hand has taken its turn with others at the exacting duty of daily prediction and has carried on its assigned share of the over-great volume of routine tasks that are conventionally customary in meteorological institutions, his heart has never ceased to turn to or to yearn for the more original efforts of scientific investigation. More characteristic of the man than his work in such necessary matters as the construction of tables for the daily routine of reducing barometric observations to the level of the sea, or the preparation of instructions for reducing the daily routine of meteorological duties to the level of the observer, was his translation of several difficult mathematical memoirs on the circulation of the atmosphere, published and distributed by the Smithsonian Institution, out of which I fancy he had greater enjoyment than anyone else—though that is not saying much. Evidently enough, therefore, the one great practical scheme of daily weather prediction, that has made him deservedly eminent in the application of science to the public welfare, did not divert his mind from unpractical scientific research. He has always willingly turned his attention to new problems and become happily engrossed in them when opportunity offered, yet he has ever been ready to interrupt his work and I fear that his scientific spirit has not at all times been happy under the regulations that are presumably appropriate in a large governmental bureau, and that his sensitive nature has sometimes been bruised by the arbitrary discipline of wholesale official service. But his is a buoyant disposition, and cheerfulness has long been his dominant quality.

We all regret his absence this evening. As he can not be with us in the flesh, let us draw him forth in spirit from his self-effacing retirement; let us see in imagination the genuine surprise that he would feel on learning of our action in selecting him for a high distinction; let us through our memory of other years enjoy the genial smile with which he would return our greeting. Mr. President, it is a great pleasure most cordially to present in absentia Prof. Cleveland Abbe, that he may receive from you, through the hands of his former pupil, his present superior officer and his constant friend, the Chief of the Weather Bureau [Charles Frederick Marvin], the medal which he so richly deserves.

REMARKS BY PROF. C. F. MARVIN

Mr. President, members, and guests of the National Academy:

Words fail me to speak fully of my deep feeling on this occasion. I can not tell how much I appreciate this great privilege and honor that devolves upon me in accepting this medal for Prof. Abbe, with whom I have been intimately associated for more than 30 years. During this time we have worked side by side, so to speak, and I have learned not only to hold him in the greatest esteem because of his eminent work in science, but also to love him dearly because of those modest, gentle, and beautiful qualities of character that were just now set out in such touching fashion by Prof. Davis. His whole life and energies have been devoted to the advancement of the science of meteorology; he has thought only of its problems and how he could encourage and induce others to unravel its perplexities, and has never given any thought to himself. These characteristics, it seems to me, add greatly to the eminence Prof. Abbe has attained, the eminence unsought by himself but bountifully bestowed upon him by others. Only a short time ago, when it was learned that he had been awarded this medal and he had requested me to receive it for him, I asked him to tell me what to say for him in acceptance. Without a moment's hesitation he replied: "Oh, they do too much for me, they must not forget Henry, Espy, Ferrel, Lapham, and others."

I am only an humble worker in the domain of science and I could never hope to deserve so great an honor as a medal like this for myself. Therefore this is the greatest event in my life, and I feel deeply the privilege and honor of receiving this medal for Prof. Abbe, whom I love and esteem so highly. Just this morning I received a note from Prof. Abbe giving an account, in his own words, of his early work leading to the creation of the weather forecasting service in the United States.

If you will permit me, Mr. President, I should like to read what Prof. Abbe says. It will take but a few minutes and I believe the members of the Academy will be glad to hear from him.

A SHORT ACCOUNT OF THE CIRCUMSTANCES ATTENDING THE INCEPTION OF WEATHER FORECAST WORK BY THE UNITED STATES

BY CLEVELAND ABBE

My boyhood life in New York City had impressed me with the popular ignorance and also with the great need of something better than local lore and weather proverbs. The knowledge of the sailors and farmers whom I met seemed to me unsatisfactory. The popular articles in the New York daily papers, by Merriam, Espy, Joseph Henry, and others—notably Redfield and Loomis—had by 1857 convinced me that man should and must overcome our ignorance of the destructive winds and rains. It was in the summer of 1857 or 1858 that I read the beginning of the classic article by William Ferrel in the Mathematical Monthly. I realized that he had overcome many of the hidden difficulties of theories of storms and winds; from that day he was my guide and authority. During 1858-1864, in the practice and study of astronomy with Brünnow at Ann Arbor, Mich., and Gould at Cambridge, Mass., I was impressed with the unsatisfactory state of our knowledge of atmospheric refraction. Two years later my experience at Poulkova, Russia, and at our Naval Observatory, Washington, seemed to justify my conclusion that astronomers who would improve their meridional measurements must investigate their local atmospheric conditions more thoroughly and to this end must have numerous surrounding meteorological observations. Hence in my inaugural Cincinnati address of May 1, 1868, I stated that with a proper system of weather reports the public need of forecasts could be met and that astronomy could also be benefited.

This suggestion was taken up by Mr. John A. Gano, president of the local chamber of commerce; a committee met me, approved my plans, and promised the expenses of a first trial. I had the total solar eclipse of August 7, 1869, on my hands, but immediately began to arrange for 40 voluntary meteorological correspondents. On my return from observing the eclipse at Sioux Falls City, I stopped at Chicago and formally invited the Chicago Board of Trade to join in extending the Cincinnati system to the Great Lakes, but this invitation was declined by the Chicago Board of Trade. An editorial in a Chicago evening paper of Monday, August 16, 1869, stated the scientific basis of our observatory work. I returned at once to Cincinnati, issued the first number of the Cincinnati Weather Bulletin promptly, as promised, on September 1, 1869; it contained a few observations telegraphed from distant observers and the "probabilities" for the next day. This bulletin was posted, in my own handwriting, prominently in the hall of the chamber; but I soon found below my misspelled "Teusday" a humorous line by Mr. ——— Davis, the well-known packer: "A bad spell of weather for 'Old Probs.'" This established my future very popular name "Old Probs."

My forecasts were treated very kindly by all. I had anticipated a slow increase in accuracy; I ventured to write my father in New York City "I have started that which the country will not willingly let die." I wrote a short note to the New York Times (or Tribune) telling them how useful we could be to their shipping. On September 3, 1869, I even ventured to offer a daily telegram by the French cable to Le Verrier as founder of the Bulletin Hebdomadaire de l'Association Scientifique, and who could fully sympathize with my hopes and plans. He realized the breakers ahead of me better than I. My daily telegram from Milwaukee came from the well-known Smithsonian observer and author, Prof. Increase Allen Lapham. He had known and appreciated the works of Espy, Redfield, Loomis, and others, but he had become absorbed in other studies; he now urged the local Milwaukee society to do something for Lake Michigan. His friends were just about to go to the Richmond meeting of the National Board of Trade; there they met William Hooper and John A. Gano. These merchants of Cincinnati found that they had the same idea as H. E. Paine, of Milwaukee, i. e., that the Federal Government should develop the Cincinnati enterprise and make it useful to the whole country. The National Board of Trade indorsed this idea; Prof. Lapham, of Milwaukee, drew up some statistics of storms and destruction on the Lakes; the Hon. Halbert E. Paine prepared Public Resolution No. 9; we each put our shoulders to the wheel and behold on February 9, 1870, the Secretary of War was authorized to carry out this new duty. I had spent a year in finding stations, voluntary observers, and telegraph facilities; every old classmate or friend of progressive meteorology had helped the new idea. The work had now passed out of my hands. I saw that I must soon go back to the observatory work that I had undertaken—the rejuvenation of the famous old Cincinnati observatory—but there was much more to be done. A letter from the Chief Signal Officer, United States Army, Gen. Albert J. Myer, asked for all possible coöperation. The officials of the Western Union Telegraph Co. offered the observatory the same free daily weather reports that they had for 20 years been giving to the Smithsonian Institution and the daily press; so I continued temporarily to make and publish the Cincinnati Bulletin, but in a much simpler form and without forecasts. This continued until May 10, 1870, when I was married, and the preparation of the midnight bulletin passed over to the officials of the local telegraph office. It was continued in this shape until November, 1870, when the tridaily bulletins of the Army Signal Service began. With the help of ——— Williams, who was in charge of the Western Union office, I printed in October, 1869, a code of cipher, and should have used this code for economy, had not the Joint Resolution of February 9, 1870, anticipated further reports by my own stations. This code was subsequently greatly improved by Weather Bureau men, and particularly by Gen. A. W. Greely, and it is still in use.

The manifold duplicate copies and the printed copies of the daily Cincinnati Observatory Bulletin were distributed until the chamber of commerce no longer needed to support it; then Mr. Williams devised a simple form of manifold map that was a great improvement on my original tabular form of daily reports. This map was soon adopted by the Signal Service, but was itself displaced in turn by the present handsome daily lithographed chart. Without the help of Armstrong and Williams and the new manifold method patented by J. Jones we could not have promptly responded to the needs of our friends.

By November, 1870, I had gone to New York and prepared to go as astronomer on one of the Panama Canal surveys, but I gave this up and should have returned soon to Cincinnati had I not, in December, received a letter from Gen. Myer stating that he wished to see me. My work with him in the Weather Bureau of the Army Signal Service began January 3, 1871. After a month's practice it was decided that my forecast would evidently more than fill the popular expectations and tridaily publications began at once. The term "probabilities" then became official, as it had begun in 1869, and in those days it was appropriate; but we have long since used and accepted the word "forecast."

The subsequent development of the service under Gens. Myer, Hazen, and Greely, and Profs. Harrington, Moore, and Marvin may be gathered from their special or annual reports. The service has been greatly favored by the hearty coöperation of many men of knowledge, skill, and enthusiasm.

TIMOTHY HARLOW ABBE OF ENFIELD (see page 306)

Some years ago Mr. Abbe made an extended collection of records pertaining to the family history. Many of these records were used in the compilation of the history of the Enfield branch. He also rendered to the town of Enfield a great service by devoting his time and thought to the accomplishment of a noble purpose for the young men of the town.

His daughter, Mrs. James C. Guthrie of Springfield, writes:

In our village the only place where young men could congregate was the general store and saloon combined. My parents knew the fatal attraction of the place and to counteract its influence they fitted up one of our front rooms as a reading room and bade the boys welcome. The room was always warm, light and clean, and my father encouraged the boys to study history and current events and to learn to express themselves. He formed a lyceum and the neighbors were invited in to hear their sons debate the questions of the day. A deep thinker and forceful speaker himself, he planted in the minds and hearts of receptive youth the pure thoughts and high ideals that were of untold value in character building. One of these young men, now a successful physician, said recently, that he and his brothers and cousins, among whom are lawyers, doctors and successful business men, felt that they owed a large part of their success in life to the influence and encouragement of Harlow Abbe.
